House Votes $100,000,000 For WPA, 290 to 110

Roosevelt's Request Cut One-Third; Restoration Fight Expected in Senate

The House of Representatives yesterday approved a $100,000,000 emergency relief bill by a vote of 290 to 110, after every effort to raise or lower the amount had been defeated.

The appropriation, $50,000,000 less than President Roosevelt has held necessary to carry WPA through the next three months, was vainly attacked by the urban-liberal Democratic bloc as inadequate and by conservative Republicans and Southern Democrats as extravagant.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where—despite an uproarious debate yesterday on New Deal spending policies—it stands a good chance of being amended to provide the $150,000,000 repeatedly requested by the Administration.

Harrington Orders Cut

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, issued a formal statement last night ordering a cut of 200,000 in the relief rolls by April 8. This reduction, he said, would bring down average WPA employment in April to 2,800,000. In the District, 990 workers will be severed from the rolls; in Maryland, 950, and in Virginia, 2,760.

Even if the full $150,000,000 had been approved, said the administrator, a total of 100,000 persons would have been dropped in April while if the House had provided no funds at all, the schedule called for a reduction of about 400,000 next week.

Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, asserted that if the Senate sustained House action in providing only $100,000,000, at least 600,000 WPA workers would be dropped before July 1.

Woodrum Defends Bill

House approval of the $100,000,000 appropriation had been generally expected, as the bill was supported by economy-minded Democrats of the Appropriations Committee, led by Representative Woodrum, of Virginia. Deposed from acting chairmanship of the sub-committee handling relief because he was considered unfriendly to the Administration's $150,000,000 goal, Woodrum, on the floor, nonetheless successfully defended the bill from assaults by "savers" and "spenders" alike.

Observers of the House were surprised at the strength shown by the urban-liberal Democrats in their efforts to increase the appropriation. On an amendment by Representative Fitzpatrick (Democrat), of New York, that would have raised the grant to $150,000,000 the teller vote was 156 for, 205 against.

Cox Amendment Defeated

Defeat of this attempt was immediately followed by a proposal of Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, to increase the sum to $125,000,000. This move also failed, 160 to 207. In both cases, the great majority of the House's 169 Republicans voted in the negative, but they were joined by fewer Democrats than had been expected.

An amendment by Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, that would have cut the appropriation down to $54,293,575, was defeated 111 to 161. It was noted that 90

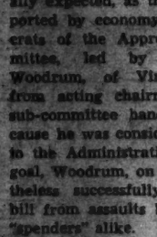
Inspecting Pistol, Schoolboy Shot Through Chest

A 10-year-old boy was shot through the chest last night because he wanted to see the pistol with which his playmate's father protects the United States mails.



WILLIAMS

The pistol, thought to have been unloaded, discharged as the playmate, 14, held it out for examination by Julian B. Williams, jr., 3604 Twenty-sixth street northeast. The weapon belongs to the playmate's father, a railway mail clerk. Both parents were attending church services at the time.

The bullet passed through the back and chest. Hospital attendants believed Julian would survive.

50,000 Witness Ceremonies in Gay Setting at Tidal Basin; Senator Barkley Crowns Peggy Townsend Queen

Spring came to Washington yesterday, wearing cherry blossoms in her hair.

The brave and fair congregated around the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park some 50,000 strong to do obeisance to her, and to welcome her with song, dance, feats of daring and grace, and a brilliant display of fireworks.

Beauty and spring and youth and loveliness were the passwords for those who desired to get at the true inwardness of the ceremonies that opened Washington's cherry blossom festival, beginning at sunrise and concluding after dusk. It was the city's own welcome to spring.

And with the crowning of Miss Peggy Townsend as Cherry Blossom Queen by Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, to reign until Easter, it became as well Washington's invitation to Americans everywhere to come and enjoy the spring beauty of their National Capital.

Barkley Kisses Queen

It was chillier than the dancers and the queen and a good many spectators expected it would be. But the temperature put no chill into the day's events. The spirit of the occasion was demonstrated warmly and heartily by everyone from statesmen to curious strollers.

Senator Barkley, for example, after crowning the Cherry Blossom Queen, planted two vernal kisses on U. S. Public Debt Passes 40 Billion Dollars Today

The public debt, swollen to almost twice its size before the New Deal came into power, will soar above the $40,000,000,000 mark today for the first time in history, Treasury statistics disclosed last night.

Relief and recovery expenditures, the Treasury's charts showed, are responsible for skyrocketing the debt until it equals $307 for each person in the United States. When this country entered the World War, the national debt was $2,975,618,585, or $28.57 per capita.

Baker Cocoa Heir Slain in Pittsburgh 'Y'

Former Virginia Man Fatally Beaten; Once Rich, Was on WPA

Pittsburgh, March 31 (AP).—The victim of a Y. M. C. A. dormitory slaying mystery was identified tonight by friends as Louis Marshall Baker, 47, scion of the Baker chocolate family of Winchester, Va., who spent a fortune and ended up on a WPA payroll.

Baker, once host to royalty and intimate friend of celebrities, died at noon in Shadyside Hospital, refusing to the last to name the assailant who beat him early Sunday in his Y. M. C. A. room.

Detectives said the janitor of the South Hills Y. M. C. A. saw Baker go to his room late Saturday night with a stranger. The two had left a saloon.

Early Sunday Baker was found unconscious, badly beaten and with four of his ribs broken. He died of internal hemorrhages.

Associates said Baker had been a boyhood friend of Rear Adm. Richard Evelyn Byrd. Educated at exclusive schools, he returned to Winchester and took part in social service work, they understood he had given the Boy Scouts a large gift at one time.

Baker owned several theaters in his home town, later became affiliated with a Southern theater chain and for several years owned the Winchester club in the Virginia State League.

Baker entertained Queen Marie of Rumania on her visit to Virginia in 1926 during her American tour, the physician said. Later he lost his fortune and disappeared.

Security Board Official Calls Favoritism Charge 'Falsehood'

In the smoke-filled room where Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, holds "little family gatherings" to talk over "favoritism" in the Federal service, John J. Corson, of the Social Security Board, threw a fighting word yesterday.

Corson, director of the SSB Bureau of Old-age Insurance, said Benjamin Beecher did not get a $5,600-a-year section chief job because he knew SSB Chairman Arthur E. Altmeyer and the man who said he did uttered "a falsehood." He was speaking to Maj. H. J. Odenthal, a former employe of the SSB, and he said Beecher joined him in branding the statement.

Odenthal glared at Corson as Corson continued by demanding that witnesses before the committee be placed under oath. "Here," interrupted Ellender. "I'm trying to get at the bottom of all this and those who don't want to tell the truth can walk out of that door over there." Nobody left.

The meeting was a three-hour tempestuous discussion of vissicitudes Grover H. Sheppard encountered as an employe of the SSB, with an emphatic denial from Beecher that he ever said "civil service employes weren't worth a damn." At

Smith Calls Big Spending Bait for Votes

Senate in Uproar As Schwellenbach, Barkley Deny Charge; 'Cotton Ed' Firm

By Robert C. Albright.

Senator Ellison D. (Cotton-Ed) Smith, outspoken survivor of the Administration's purge, yesterday plunged the Senate into a near riot of personalities by charging his colleagues "are pouring out Federal money in the hope of votes."

SEN. SMITH

Brought to bay by "Young Turk" New Dealers and under fire by the Senate Majority Leader, the South Carolina Senator refused to retract his words and declared Senators "know that their so-called humanitarianism and philanthropy is based on vote-getting."

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington called it "the greatest insult that has ever been uttered on the floor of this body." Majority Leader Barkley termed it unfair to make "a general broadside criticism" of Senators. And Senator Pepper, (Democrat), of Florida said he did not accuse Smith "of material considerations only, and I do not think he has a right to accuse me."

His grey moustache bristling, Smith stubbornly stood his ground as shouts of "Who has the floor?" and "Regular order!" mingled with the loud rapping of the gavel.

"I spoke the truth as I saw it, and God help me I will not take it back," shouted Smith.

"I meant no reflection on the Senators when I stated they were playing a political game and were wanting to pour out this money in the hope of votes. I do not make myself any more righteous than anyone else, but I reiterate that statement. You would not do it if you did not think it could get you votes, and you know it."

Smith's second blistering attack in two days on Government spending and Congressional motives followed a prodding assault on the South Carolinian by Senator Pepper, ardent New Dealer and author of a resolution to prohibit any removal of needy persons from WPA rolls.

Admittedly Honest

Confronting Smith, Pepper declared: "You belong to an old day in this country."

"His (Smith's) opinions have ceased to be the current opinions of his country," Pepper told the Senate. "He belongs to an attitude that was appropriate to an era in his country's development, and I never saw a man who in his heart entertained those views more honestly or expressed them more ably than

Eats 2 Records To Set One

Chicago, March 31 (INS).—A University of Chicago student today ate two phonograph records and took a few bites off a third.

The young man, John Patrick, then said:

"Fellow students, what I have done this day I have done for alma mater.

"I believe I have proved that the University of Chicago is superior to Harvard, where a student recently ate 24 goldfish, and to Penn State, where a student of meager appetite downed 25 goldfish with catsup, and to Kutztown, Pa., State Teachers College, where a freshman gulped 43."

'Tax Certificates' Issued by Germany Called Confession Of Bankruptcy

By Felix Cotten.

The German government is virtually bankrupt, due to the heavy cost of armament expansion, Government experts who have followed Nazi financial maneuvers declared yesterday.

The "confession" of bankruptcy, in the opinion of close students of the German situation, was the announcement last week that the Nazi state in the future would finance itself by issuance of "tax certificates."

These certificates, Commerce Department authorities explained, will circulate to a limited extent like money. In other words, the German government has embarked on a modified form of disguised currency inflation.

Can't Be Used for Wages

It is noteworthy, however, experts said, that the tax certificates cannot be tendered in payment of salaries and wages. Thus the average German, who not so many years ago was badly burned by currency inflation, will not come in contact with the new "money."

Tax certificates, it is explained, are to be issued to contractors supplying the government in payment of up to 40 per cent of the amounts owed them. The certificates will circulate in German business channels.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that the United States, after trying for two years to collect a tax levy against the Reichsbank of $125,000, plus interest, had attached, through court action, balances which the German national bank has on deposit with the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering said the statute of limitations was about to operate. For this reason, the internal revenue collector was directed to obtain a lien against available Reichsbank funds.

Reichsbank "Stalled"

The amount of the levy was agreed upon in 1937, but the Reichsbank had "stalled," it was intimated, on the matter of payment.

German Embassy officials said the lien had been raised some days ago after their government had made a deposit of about $300,000 against the tax claim. Helvering said, however, that if the lien had been raised he had not heard about it. If this had occurred within the last day, he declared, the collector at New York undoubtedly would have informed him. He pointed out that, under the law, a lien is served against twice the amount of the claim, which in the present case had increased to $144,454.

Some authorities believe Nazi

Stocks Tumble, Bonds Bog Down In Swift Market

New York, March 31 (AP).—Stocks tumbled $1 to more than $6 a share today in the steepest drop since last September as investors dumped holdings in the fastest stock exchange dealings in nearly five months.

News that Britain and France had pledged themselves to fight with arms any German thrust at Poland's freedom failed to bolster shares after an early rally.

Bonds bogged down with stocks, with rail loans the weakest.

Deadline Passes In Coal Parley

New York (Saturday), April 1 (AP).—The labor contract covering 338,000 Appalachian soft coal miners producing 70 per cent of the Nation's supply expired at midnight last night as coal operators and United Mine Workers Union officials remained in conference over a new contract. The meeting adjourned at 12:45 without comment. It will be resumed at 11 a. m.

The miners will not return to work Monday without some kind of contract, union officials have said, but no immediate public effect was expected from the possible stoppage because soft coal is used principally in industry, which has a seven weeks supply.

Argentina Acts To Block Nazis In Patagonia

Document Challenging Sovereignty Inspires Official Inquiry

Buenos Aires, March 31 (AP).—Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo today announced all departments of the Argentine government would join in an investigation of charges that Nazis, backed by German officials had challenged Argentine sovereignty over Patagonia.

The newspaper Noticias Graficas yesterday published a document which it said was a facsimile of a report on Patagonia to the German colonial ministry from a German embassy adviser named Von Schubert and Albert Muller, chief of the Argentine Nazi party.

Police took into custody Enrique Jurges, described as a former Nazi and friend of Capt. Ernst Roehm, storm trooper chief of staff who died in Adolf Hitler's blood purge of June 30, 1934. Jurges, held incommunicado, was reported to have sent copies of the document to President Roberto M. Ortiz and to Noticias Graficas.

The alleged document stated Patagonia, a southern area of 267,058 square miles with 77,750 inhabitants, might be considered a no-man's land even though Argentina considers it hers "on the basis of outdated political ideas."

The alleged report contained a passage saying it was submitted in connection with "the possibilities of colonization in the theoretical supposition that the whole territory should be annexed as a field for settlement and economic activity by Germans."

The German embassy issued a statement that it had "protested to the foreign ministry of Argentina" against publication of the document.

Hitler, Aroused, to Answer Chamberlain Talk Today

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 31.—Adolf Hitler, pictured as thoroughly aroused by British Prime Minister Chamberlain's pledge to defend Polish independence, was expected to give an answer filled with fireworks tomorrow when he speaks at Wilhelmshaven, his North sea navy base.

Although persons usually charged with stating government views openly acknowledged they must remain silent on Hitler's views, responsible Nazi authorities said "the Fuehrer will not be frightened by a British prime minister!"

D. N. B. (official German news agency) asserted Chamberlain's declaration could "be viewed only as an extremely laughable attempt to incite unrest and to sow distrust of Germany in the family of nations."

The agency's attack, dismissing the British prime minister's statement as a maneuver that would not alter Germany's course, echoed a new, vigorous anti-British campaign in the controlled Nazi press that began before Chamberlain spoke.

"The whole maneuver," DNB commented, "certainly appears as though England can only make little nations believe that she is ready to act."

Chamberlain Speaks

By Ralph W. Barnes,
Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 31.—The British government took the final step in the reversal of its foreign policy today when, in the House of Commons, Prime Minister Chamberlain committed this country to go to war in defense of Poland against possible German aggression, provided the Poles themselves were prepared to offer armed resistance.

Amid cheers, Chamberlain said he had been authorized by the French government to make it plain "that they stand in the same position in this matter as do his majesty's government."

Except for the various commitments under the League of Nations Covenant — commitments which are now considered a dead letter—this occasion is the first in modern times in which Great Britain has engaged herself openly in peacetime to defend a power in central or eastern Europe against possible attack—unless the vague proffer to guarantee the revised frontiers of Czecho-Slovakia after the Munich conference can be considered in this category.

Limited Alliance

Tonight, Great Britain, France and Poland stand committed to what is, in reality, a limited defensive alliance of the prewar type. A similar British guarantee, backed by France, is expected to be given soon to Rumania and other "peace-loving powers," which may be drawn into the coalition.

Chamberlain made it clear his "interim" statement today was a stage in the formation of a defensive bloc, resolved "to put an end to aggression and substitute for it the more reasonable and orderly methods of discussion."

"As the House is aware," the prime minister said, "certain consultations are now proceeding with other governments. In order to make perfectly clear the posi-

Warsaw, March 31.—Exchange of military information among Britain, Poland and France was reported to be already under way tonight, backing up the newly pledged British-French guarantee to Poland's independence in the crisis arising from Germany's eastward march.

Poland warmly greeted the promise given by Prime Minister Chamberlain in London while military talks were being carried on by Poland and Britain through the French general staff.

These consultations were designed, it was understood, to coordinate the land, sea and air forces of the three nations in event of any aggression against Poland, particularly in Danzig and the Polish corridor.

Troops Reported in Line

There was a possibility British and French warships might be sent to Gdynia, the Baltic port Poland has constructed at the outlet of the Polish Corridor.

(Danzig dispatches last Saturday said Polish troops, estimated by Germans to number more than 10,000, had taken positions at Gdynia. Polish officials declined to comment on the reports.

(There also were unconfirmed Danzig reports of German troop concentrations in East Prussia and along the western frontier of the Polish Corridor. German spokesmen in Berlin today explained the garrison in East Prussia always had been the strongest in Germany. They denied there was anything like a concentration of German troops on the Polish border.)

Possibilities Seen

Warsaw authorities saw several possibilities:

Hitler might act swiftly to achieve his aims before Polish-British-French co-operation has been worked out.

He might accept peaceful relations with Poland, including a friendly settlement of the Danzig question.

He might pursue a peaceful course at present in hope an opportunity for action would come when tension has eased.

Circles close to the government emphasized that Poland still was seeking an understanding with Germany over Danzig on the basis of respect for each other's interests.

Nazis Rule Town

Danzig, technically under League of Nations control, has a Nazi regime and a predominantly German population. It is under Polish customs control, however, and Poland has extensive economic interests there.

Business Tax May Remain Another Year

House Committee Fails to Agree on Sales, Income Levy

After members of the House subcommittee on District taxation had struggled unsucessfully for more than two hours to decide on major principles of a proposed long-range tax program, Chairman Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, last night declared it "entirely possible" that the present law might remain in force another year.

"There is every possibility we'll have to fall back on the business privilege tax law, with refinements," he said. "We have not decided on a sales tax, nor on an income tax, nor upon a combination of the two."

Next week, until the committee holds its deciding session, "the experts will be busy getting more figures together," he asserted.

Ba[illegible]s Loom Big

Difficulties of working out an income tax adaptable to the District and its population of "absentee voters" appear insurmountable, if such a tax is to be a major source of revenue.

Combined with a sales tax, as recommended in the original tax study plan submitted by Dr. Chester Pond and Colin F. Stam, experts who surveyed the situation in the summer, "a million combinations are possible and the opposition is strong."

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, member of the Senate District Committee, met with the Nichols group yesterday morning to voice his opposition to a sales tax and his belief in the personal income tax idea.

Rates Announced

"The sales tax always works a hardship on the people least able to pay," he said.

The Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation announced a schedule of rates under the personal net income tax proposed by its members and boosted as a means of raising $3,300,000 annually.

The rates proposed vary from 1 per cent on the first $3,000 of taxable income, above exemptions, to 7 per cent on taxable income above $30,000. Personal exemptions proposed are $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married couples. Four hundred dollars is allowed for each dependent.

If a deduction as large as 30 per cent of the estimated yield were allowed as credits for payment by nonresidents on State income taxes, the yield to the District still would be $2,300,000, the committee claimed. In view of the Supreme Court's recent decision, "the cry of unconstitutionality" can no longer be raised against an income tax proposal, it was further declared.

Congress Assent Needed

Members of the Nichols subcommittee point out they are up against "the very practical proposition of agreeing upon something that stands a chance of getting accepted by Congress." That is why they now are wondering if there is a possibility of getting beyond the present tax law at the present session.

In attendance at the executive session of the Nichols subcommittee yesterday were Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois; McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi; Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts; District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and David McCoach; Elwood H. Seal, Corporation Counsel; Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the District Board of Tax Appeals, and Dr. Pond and Stam.

House Votes WPA $100,000,000

Republicans and only 21 Democrats favored the Cox amendment. Another effort to cut the figure to $75,000,000, proposed by Representative White (Republican), of Ohio, was easily defeated, 75 to 259.

After the amendments had been disposed of, Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, moved that the $100,000,000 bill be returned to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to cut the sum to $55,000,4000. He was defeated on a roll call vote, 130 to 277 but not before the liberal bloc had made an unsuccessful parliamentary maneuver to obtain a roll call on the question of raising the figure to $150,000,000. At no time during consideration of the relief bill was there a record vote on the simple question of $150,000,000 versus $100,000,00.

Log-Rolling Discussed

Some advocates of the higher appropriation, confident that the Senate would vote for $150,000,000, said last night that when a roll call is take on the conference report, they would have a majority of the House. Talk of log-rolling was again heard in House corridors, as efforts were renewed to effect a trade between supporters of WPA and supporters of the $250,000,000 farm parity payments, an item which is also expected to be restored by the Senate.

In the final vote on passage of the bill, the minority of 110 included a die-hard group of 22 Democrats, of whom six were from Georgia, five from Virginia (Representatives Burch, Drewry, Robertson, Satterfield and Smith), four from Texas, three from North Carolina, two from Mississippi and one each from Arkansas and Nebraska. Of the 290 affirmative votes, 68 were Republican.

Food Put in Evidence

The $100,000,000 relief bill would bring the total amount available for the current fiscal year to $2,163,868,406, higher than in 1936, 1938 or 1938.

In the course of yesterday's debate, an exhibit of prunes, flour, beans and a few other staples was displayed to the House by Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, as "one week's food for one person" on WPA. Woodrum suggested that this situation might be remedied by telling WPA "to spend its money on food and work instead of foolishness."

In a speech that received loud applause, Representative Casey reminded the House that "not a word" had been said about the "hospitals, schoolhouses and sewer and water systems constructed with WPA funds."

Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, declared that persons had been placed on relief rolls in his State "not on a basis of need but on the basis of how many votes they could control."

Bringing Up Girl Triplets Not So Harrowing, Parents of Capital's Youngest Trio Assert

Still Hard for Stranger to Tell Which Is Which; They Rebel Against Hats, Socks and Shoes, But 'Behave Beautifully' in Parents' Absence

Take it from a married couple who ought to know, bringing up triplets is not as harrowing as one might think.

Authorities for that statement are the parents of Washington's youngest triplets, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Middleton, 3119 Thirty-eighth street northwest. He is athletic director of St. Alban's School for Boys.

The same reporter who paced the corridors of Columbia Hospital with Middleton on June 3, 1937, while he was waiting for the babies to arrive—the doctor had told him in advance to expect triplets—called on the family yesterday to learn about the headaches that accompany the rearing of quintuplets-minus-two.

"But there aren't any headaches," said Middleton.

"No, there really aren't," seconded his wife, adding that there are many compensations for the trebled volume of work.

"Frances Dubos is the leader of the trio," Mrs. Middleton continued. "deVismes is the timid one. Mary Warner seems to be the gayest."

The parents admitted they had their troubles telling the girls apart for the first few months. Now, however, even the maid can distinguish one from another, though a stranger could hardly tell Mary Warner from deVismes from Frances Dubos.

When the writer and photographer arrived, the 22-month-old (come Monday) triplets were asleep in their play pens on the front porch. All lay on their tomachs. They were hatless. One apparently had pulled off her right shoe and stocking and lay semi-barefoot.

"They refuse to wear hats," their mother explanied. "And they often rebel against shoes and stockings. But they never have colds."

The girls have golden hair, blue eyes and fair complexions. DeVismes and Mary Warner weigh about 24 pounds and their sister is about a half pound heavier. At birth they weighed 5 pounds 6 ounces, 5 pounds 1 ounce and 5 pounds 10 ounces, respectviely.

"The first time we were ever separated was last week," said Mrs. Middleton. "My husband and I left on a trip and the girls stayed with a family in Silver Spring. They behaved beautifully, I was told, and hardly missed us at all."

The triplets have a 12-year-old brother, Hunter, who is practically the forgotten man of the Middleton family.

Power to regulate or abolish railroad holding companies would be given the Interstate Commerce Commission under a bill introduced by Senators Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, and Truman (Democrat), Missouri.

The measure also would set up new and rigid controls over railroad holding company financial matters.

It would give the carriers authority for voluntary consolidations subject to approval by the I. C. C., and would end a requirement that any consolidation must conform to a program laid down by the I. C. C.

Speaker Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, received a new gavel made from wood from the front porch of the old home of the late President McKinley at Canton, Ohio. It was given to him by L. S. Hamaker, president of the Canton Chamber of Commerce, and Dallas Hosteller, managing director. Dell Courtney, of Canton, and Representative Secommbe (Republican), Ohio, also were in the delegation.

Garner Is Man To Save Nation, Says Legislator

He's Typically American, Rep. Kennedy Writes; McNutt May Quit

By the Associated Press.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), New York, wrote John Boettiger, President Roosevelt's son-in-law, yesterday that Vice President Garner is the man to save "not only our beloved party, but our beloved country in 1940."

Referring to Boettiger's correspondence with Elliott Roosevelt this week, Kennedy wrote:

"Those of us who served with John N. Garner in the House of Representatives recognize his capacity for leadership and his intimate knowledge of government.

"He is one of the best informed men in public life. . . ."

Typically American

"The characters in American history who are remembered most affectionately by our citizens are those who were known to be 'typically American.' A 'typical American' has red blood in his veins, tells a good story, has a fine sense of humor (and is able to laugh when the joke is on him), is sympathetic with the problems of his neighbor, is intensely loyal to his friends and realizes that the other fellow is entitled to his opinion upon the questions of the hour. In addition to these human qualities Mr. Garner possesses the high character and the knowledge of government and of men that makes for a sound and successful conduct of the affaires of state."

Elliott Roosevelt had said in a radio broadcast that Vice President Garner was "in the driver's seat right now" as a likely Democratic candidate in 1940. Boettiger wrote an open letter to Elliott saying "Tell Mr. Garner for us that we're very fond of him, but he just don't fit."

Friends said yesterday that Paul V. McNutt would resign as high commissioner to the Philippines this summer and come home to take charge of his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Middle-of-Road Man

McNutt, former Indiana Governor, is being advanced by his supporters as a middle-of-the-road Democrat whom all factions could support. Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, told reporters:

"McNutt was ahead of the New Deal when he was Governor. He's in an excellent position to be the compromise candidate."

President Roosevelt was said in authoritative quarters to have advised McNutt that he could not retain his position as Philippine high commissioner unless he was willing to stay in the islands.

Coincident with the McNutt-for-President talk was a statement from Senator Pepper (Democrat), Florida, that Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, the Administration floor leader, would make an "excellent Democratic candidate" for 1940.

"Barkley is liberal without being radical," Pepper told newsmen. "I believe he would be able to carry out the fundamental policies of the President."

There's Nothing New; Even Edison Was Antedated

By International News Service.

The old saying, "There is nothing new under the sun," was borne out today by Aubrey D. McFadyen, of the United States Patent Office.

The following bears out that saw, says McFayden:

A workable electric light was invented 59 years before the incandescent lamp of Thomas Edison was patented, streamlined trains were thought of during the Civil War, Alexander Graham Bell was 13 years late with his telephone, modern air conditioning and the very handy zipper made their debut in the gay nineties, a patent was issued in 1895 conceiving wireless telegraphy—long before Marconi made his experiments in this field—safety glass was patented in 1906, and 1886 brought out the idea of artificial silk.

Van Duzer Finds Few Car Victims Know How to Drive

Pedestrians who also drive automobiles are much less likely to get killed by them than those who don't, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer concluded yesterday.

Examining records of adult pedestrian deaths of the last four years, he found 92 per cent of the victims lacked permits to drive autos.

Further figures showed a majority of all pedestrians killed were either too young or too old to drive.

Auto drivers, Van Duzer reasoned, are more familiar than pedestrians with the way cars move in traffic and what to expect from motorists. He urged nondriving pedestrians to familiarize themselves with traffic regulations.

Memorial Dedication

A memorial panel and canopy at the pulpit will be dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Annie V. Woodward at Palm Sunday services tomorrow at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation. The palms will be blessed at the 7:30 a. m. rites of Holy Communion. Services also are scheduled for 11 a. m.

does the Senator from South Carolina."

Pepper said there may be "temporary occasions of short duration when the pendulum will swing toward the Senator's point of view," but predicted that "when it approaches that point it will not stay there long."

When Smith first jumped to his feet to reply, he was denied the floor on a point of order, but managed to "reiterate every word I said" in his Thursday's speech, and to repeat that Senators are influenced by "vote getting" in approving Federal outlays.

Barkley Denies It

Above the din that followed, Senator Barkley shouted: "I want to deny that statement and say that so far as I am concerned, I have never voted for a dollar to feed and clothe and house the hungry people of this country for the purpose of getting votes."

Schwellenbach said he thought Smith had "cast aspersion upon every member of this body" and had "attempted to impute bad motives to every member of this body."

"I leave it to every man here to search his own heart," Smith retorted. "It is easy to rise in righteous indignation because someone had the nerve to tell the truth. That is all this is. Let each man go down into his own heart——."

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, later entered the debate to predict the South Carolina Senator will "violate" his stand against spending when the $250,000,000 farm parity payment amendment comes before the Senate, and to charge Smith with "inconsistency."

Was "In the Doghouse"

Smith, who is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, had been waiting all day to call up his riddled cotton bill, permitting farmers to repossess their Government loan cotton by paying 3 cents a pound and agreeing to reduce their next crop by that amount. Before the Senate adjourned, it was made the unfinished business of the Senate, on motion of Senator George, of Georgia. Smith's original measure, only a vestige of which is now left, was denounced by the President as too costly. A Senate tug of war is approaching between the Smith bill and the President's counter-proposal for a cotton export subsidy.

In Thursday's prelude to yesterday's lively clash, the Senator told colleagues he was "in the doghouse," but could still bark and bite.

"If trying to get votes is a reflection, all of us are reflected upon," he told angered colleagues yesterday. "I have done my best to gain votes by being what I am. You all can construe that as you please."

Again he told Senators that if they liked him "I am very glad, but if they despise me because of what I am, they can take it or lump it. I would not sacrifice my feelings. I would not be a mental prostitute for all the gifts of the gods."

Earlier he grabbed Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, by the shoulder and said: "Look me in the face and tell me you are always moved by a great humanitarian purpose."

"Don't press me," laughed Reynolds.

Once he remarked that his days were numbered and he would soon face his maker, adding: "If God is a gentleman, He will recognize one when He sees one."

Barkley took the floor a second time to say no one can "draw a straight line in the Senate and be certain that all on the right is statesmanship and all on the left is political."

"I Ask Consideration"

If Senators who vote for relief funds are to be accused of keeping people on the pay roll for their votes, Barkley warned, "there might be retaliation on the part of other Senators who would accuse some other Senator of voting for some other bill dependent upon how many votes it would register for him in his own State."

Leaders Weigh Shelving Smith To Save NLRB

Toning Down Policies Seen as Move to Head Off New Legislation

Modernization in the policies of the National Labor Relations Board, marked by selection of a successor to Donald Wakefield Smith, board member, last night was said to be under serious Administration consideration.

In a usually reliable quarter it was said Smith's recess reappointment will not be sent to the Senate this session. Several "moderate liberals" are said to have been approached informally as possible successors.

Preparing to oppose any change in the Wagner labor relations act as unnecessary, Administration officials were said to be encouraging a more liberal attitude by the board toward employers and a toning down of board policies in general.

Out When Congress Quits

Smith was reappointed to the board last summer over protests of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, but his nomination never has been sent to the Senate and is not expected to be. Unless he withdraws sooner, Smith would retire with the adjournment of Congress and a successor then be named.

The Smith appointment, together with board policies considered hostile to the A. F. of L. by President Green, were considered largely behind the labor federation's campaign for revision of the act through the Walsh amendments, slated for Senate hearing beginning April 11.

Proposed abandonment of the Smith nomination and moderation of board policies were believed designed to show that the reforms sought by Green can be met without new legislation.

Textile Workers to Rejoin

Meanwhile, the United Textile Workers of America, one of the first major unions to leave the American Federation of Labor to work with John L. Lewis and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, called a meeting in Washington May 8 to join hands once again with the A. F. of L.

President Green will attend the convention to present the union with a charter embodying the same rights and privileges formerly held in the federation. Frank Morrison, secretary-treasurer pro tem, said the union will review past action, discuss future policy and consider textile wage-hour policies.

Stinson Case Is Recessed Until Monday

Pajama-Clad Nurse, Underworld Boast Figure in Hearing

The third week of the Stinson annulment trial before Justice Luhring closed yestreday in a swirl of testimony about pink pajamas and threatened deals with what was referred to as "the underworld."

Mrs. Peplia Crounse Stinson added to her other charges a formal assertion that Stinson never was divorced from his previous wife.

Mrs. Stinson, who inherited $700,000 in 1933, is asking the court to annul her marriage to Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, 56, artist-lawyer-engineer-author. She says he drugged her, married her when she didn't know what was going on and made her pay him $27,000 for a separation.

Mrs. Stinson is suing to get back the $27,000, to void a trust of $230,000 which she established to go to Stinson after her death, and to have her marriage annulled. Stinson has indicated that he too, feels misused and that he feels entitled to $35,000 more for what he claims was the breach of the separation agreement.

Stinson described his romance as an authentic case of true love. Under cross-examination yesterday, however, Stinson acknowledged as his a letter produced by his wife's lawyers, Alvin L. Newmyer and A. K. Shipe, in which Stinson complained of his bride-to-be's reluctance to spend money to entertain.

Returns to Nurse

Mrs. Stinson has previously in the trial accused her nurse, Miss Jessica Shoemaker, of plotting with Stinson to give her drugs and dupe her into marriage. It was Miss Shoemaker who re-entered the testimony on pink pajamas yesterday.

Harold M. Marsh, long a friend of Stinson and once his attorney, testified that it was he who brought the couple together and that he was called into settle what he called "lovers' quarrels."

A month after the marriage, Marsh testified, he was called into the conference at which it was agreed that $27,000 was to be paid Stinson and the couple would part forever. He said Mrs. Stinson complained against Miss Shoemaker at this conference, claiming that Miss Shoemaker had been seen emerging from the library where Stinson slept, wearing pink pajamas.

Servants Provide Data

Mrs. Stinson got this tale from the servants, Marsh said she admitted.

Stinson asked for and got $10 from his wife while the separation agreement was being discussed, said Marsh.

"Some things surpass all understanding," sighed Justice Luhring.

Stinson was very impatient over the delay in reaching the separation settlement said Marsh, and once threatened to sell his rights in the trust fund "to the underworld" unless something was done.

Attorney Carroll L. Beedy, former Representative from Maine, who with George Horning, jr., is counsel for Stinson, asked about Stinson's condition when he said this, Marsh said Stinson was nervous and excited.

The trial will resume Monday.

Libby Holman Reynolds Wed Secretly Here To Ralph Holmes, Actor, Lawyer Reports

Millionaire's Widow Stopped in D. C. on Way To N. Y. From Florida

Libby Holman, torch singer, was secretly married here last Monday to Ralph Holmes, 23-year-old actor, according to an announcement made in New York yesterday by her attorney, Benet Polikoff.

Miss Holman is the widow of Zachary Smith Reynolds, North Carolina tobacco heir who was mysteriously shot to death in 1932.

Polikoff said that the blues singer and Holmes, son of the actor, Taylor Holmes, were honeymooning at her country estate near Greenwich, Conn.

Mrs. John Durant, of New York, according to Polikoff, was a witness to the wedding ceremony.

A week ago Friday Miss Holman and Mrs. Durant made a surprise visit to the Carlton Hotel and remained until Monday. The women, both deeply tanned, said they were stopping off for a few days en route from Florida to New York. The husky-voiced, sad-eyed singer had only recently completed a winter engagement at a Coral Gables (Fla.) night club.

Members of the hotel staff said the two women received no visitors, and that Holmes was not registered at the hotel during the period of their stay.

Search of marriage licence records in Washington and adjacent Virginia and Maryland counties, however, disclosed no application to wed filed by the Miss Holman or Holmes within the past several weeks.

END INSERT

Libby's son, Christopher Smith Reynolds, was born after the death of his father, who died of a pistol bullet wound at his Winston-Salem (N. C.) mansion. The son, now 6, won an estate of $7,000,000 following a court fight on his behalf by his mother. An indictment involving Libby in the death of Reynolds was dropped. The child, born prematurely, spent weeks in a hospital incubator.

Libby Holman, torch singer and widow of Smith Reynolds, tobacco heir who was mysteriously shot dead in his home at Winston-Salem, N. C., a few years ago, was married in Washington Monday to Ralph Holmes, actor (inset)

Libby, daughter of Alfred Holman, Cincinnati lawyer, rocketed to fame on Broadway as the torch singer of "Moanin' Low" in the first "Little Show." Following an absence of several years, she returned to Broadway in 1934 in "Revenge With Music." Last year she appeared in the musical show, "You Never Know."

Holmes, whose father played the role of Secretary Morgenthau in "I'd Rather Be Right," is a brother of Phillips Holmes, also an actor.

Phillips' name has been linked with that of Miss Holman, and it was he who is supposed to have introduced his brother to the singer. The wedding culminated a two-year romance.

Rumania and Poland Agree To Resist Reich

Will Defy Hitler on Promise of British, French Armed Aid

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 31.—Both Poland and Rumania were reported in responsible diplomatic quarters tonight to have agreed to stand with the pledge of British and French armed support against any new eastern push by Germany at their expense.

Two developments lent support to this belief:

Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement to the House of Commons of the British-French pledge to back Poland's independence with arms.

The signing of a French-Rumanian one-year trade treaty in Paris today to counter Germany's recent commercial accord with Rumania.

Chamberlain's announcement caused a sensation in Paris, where there was no previous public knowledge that it was coming.

Newspapers displayed the statement under huge headlines. Paris Soir said "Chamberlain announces to Commons an Anglo-French-Polish alliance."

Foreign ministry officials, however, said the French government was "author with the British" of the statement, and it was only "temporary" pending further Eastern Europe consultations.

The ceremony of the signing of the French-Rumanian commercial pact, by which France undertakes to double her purchases of Rumanian oil and to slash 60 per cent off her duties on Rumanian agricultural imports, was highlighted by a statement by the Rumanian Ambassador, Georges Tatarescue, who said:

"Recognizing that economic vassalage transforms itself sooner or later into political vassalage, Rumania will defend her economic independence with the same energy with which she defends her political independence and the integrity of her frontiers."

Officials announced also that a decree to be published in the official journal tomorrow would make effective another trade treaty—between France and Yugoslavia. This accord, concluded February 11, is expected to double French imports from Yugoslavia, which amounted to 100,000,000 francs ($2,647,700) in 1938.

The French cabinet was called to meet at 10 a. m. (5 a. m. E.S.T.) tomorrow to consider new decrees for military and financial strengthening of the nation and to review the international situation in the light of the new guarantees to Poland and Premier Mussolini's latest speech saying Italy could "wait" for realization of her Mediterranean demands on France.

Brown to Press Numbers War Outside D. C.

Names 6 to Complete Reorganization Of Vice Squad

Plans to wage a continuing campaign against the numbers game, which stretches beyond the District boundaries, are being formulated by Chief of Police Brown, authoritative sources revealed at headquarters last night, when reorganization of the vice squad was completed.

Sources close to Maj. Brown said that without the aid of nearby officials he intends to bring to justice the Washington numbers barons, who have moved their counting houses into nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Several months ago Maj. Brown and the Commissioners called a conference of law enforcement agents from the nearby States in an effort to form a tri-State alliance to war against the policy racket. It is believed the conference was a failure, and Maj. Brown intends to carry on alone.

Yesterday, he chose six men from various precincts to fill vacancies on the vice squad which he depleted of all but four investigators. Their names were kept a secret.

Meantime, Brown announced the removal from the squad of Policemen B. R. Campbell, W. D. DeGroot, D. L. Green and W. D. Young. Six others who were taken from the squad since February 2 are Sergt. George Deyoe and Privates William McEwen, Melvin O. Kite, Harry O. Dodson, R. D. McClure and F. A. Jordan.

Brown said the changes were made "for the good of the service."

Capt. George M. Little, veteran chief of the vice squad, will continue in command, it was said.

At the same time, the promotions of two police privates were made public. Charles F. Cummins, Ninth Precinct, and Charles L. Van Meter, First Precinct, were named to fill vacancies left by the death of Sergt. Joseph P. Comisky and the transfer of Sergt. Thomas Heffernan from the Fourth Precinct to night inspector.

Growing War Fear May End Roosevelt Trip

President Keeps In Phone Touch With Europe

By International News Service.

Warm Springs, Ga., March 31.—President Roosevelt kept the transatlantic circuits busy conversing with London and Paris today, and told newspapermen that developments abroad were taking shape so rapidly he might be forced to terminate his holiday in Warm Springs—a statement reflecting the world-wide fear that Hitler has embarked on a campaign of world domination.

Secretary of State Hull phoned the "Little White House" frequently from Washington, relaying latest dispatches from abroad, and Mr. Roosevelt in turn put in transatlantic phone calls, presumably to Ambassadors Kennedy and Bullitt at London and Paris.

A source close to the President's Pine Mountain cottage declared the democracies had become convinced that Hitler, unchecked, would attempt world dominance. Should war come, it was said, the world will know absolutely upon whom the responsibility will lie, because England and France will fight only if Germany deliberately invades another non-German country, such as Poland.

England and France warned Germany that a threat to Poland's independence would mean war, it was said, deliberately for the purpose of putting the German chancellor on record.

President Admits Concern

President Roosevelt at a roadside press conference admitted his concern, said he had talked to the State Department and Europe several times in the morning and expected to talk several more times in the afternoon and evening. He said his stay here might be terminated without notice. Further, he declined comment.

Here, a competent source came to the fore.

World hopes of last September that Hitler would confine his aspirations to bringing into the Reich only contiguous territory populated by sympathetic Germans, it was said, have been dissipated by events of the past few days.

It was pointed out that Hitler has now swallowed up many millions of Slavs (Czechs), has taken millions of Hungarians under his domination and effected a partial economic domination of millions of Roumanians.

These moves do not square with Hitler's promises and statements of last Fall, asserted the White House source, and whereas it was hoped in September that the limit had been reached, today there is fear he has no limit.

As America views the situation, Hitler—unless checked—may well attempt domination of all the small countries of Europe and then turn his attention to other continents, Africa, Asia and possibly the Americas.

World fears of the extent of Hitler's campaign are obvious, it was said. Switzerland, Holland, Finland and Jugoslavia have fears. The Baltic states are apprehensive and in Turkey and Persia fear exists

The President told reporters that Senate Finance Committee action voting down a move to raise tariff duties on oils and fats pleased him. While the amount imported was an inconsequential percentage of our consumption, he said, its sale gave producing countries exchange needed to buy American goods. All this, Mr. Roosevelt said, is in line with the Administration's reciprocal trade policy.

The Executive said he probably would act on the national defense bill and the government reorganization measure, both of which he expects in an early mail pouch.

With Mr. Roosevelt was Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

While trouble in Europe increased today, Japan moved on the other side of the world to grab Spratly Islands (arrow), 350 miles off the Philippines and 600 miles from England's great naval base at Singapore. The Spratlys were claimed by France in 1933. They would make an excellent airplane and submarine base

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 31.—Japan announced today she had assumed jurisdiction over the Spratly Islands, 247 acres of coral reef strategically situated in the South China Sea and claimed by France in 1933.

The islands, important principally as a possible base for seaplanes and submarines, lie equidistant—about 350 miles—from the Philippines on the northeast, British North Borneo on the east, and French Indo-China, on the west. They are about 600 miles from the great British naval base at Singapore.

Stating the islands previously had been ownerless, the foreign office announced it had assumed jurisdiction over them for "the protection and regulation of lives, property and enterprises of Japanese nationals there."

France occupied the seven islands of the group in 1933, making the first formal claim to their ownership since their discovery in 1867. Japan protested, implying a claim to their sovereignty because Japanese traders had tried to exploit phosphate deposits there in 1925.

(A French foreign office spokesman said in Paris Friday the islands "undoubtedly" were French, but he added that a careful examination of existing records must be made to determine the exact bases of French claims.)

The islands have no great commercial value, but they surround lagoons which could be used for seaplanes, submarines and small naval craft.

The Japanese foreign office said today that since 1917 Japanese have been going there and investing "a considerable amount of capital and erecting various permanent establishments," and admitted that Tokyo, on "several occasions," had sent warships there to assist settlers.

"But," the statement added, "the absence of administrative jurisdiction caused not only inconvenience, but has been liable to cause unnecessary dispute with France.

"Accordingly, the Japanese government, in order to eliminate such disadvantages and inconveniences, has decided to place the reefs under the jurisdiction of the governor general of Taiwan (Formosa)."

Chamberlain Promises Poles Military Help

tion of his majesty's government, in the meantime, before those consultations are concluded, I now have to inform the House that during that period, in the event of any action which clearly threatened Polish independence and which the Polish government, accordingly, considered it vital to resist with their national forces, his majesty's government would feel themselves bound at once to lend the Polish government all support in their power. They have given the Polish government an assurance to this effect.

"I may add that the French government has authorized me to make it plain that they stand in the same position in this matter as do his majesty's government.'

When Chamberlain had concluded, there were cheers from the floor of the House and a stir in the galleries, which were packed with visitors, including many foreign diplomats.

Before announcing the guaranty to Poland, the prime minister took occasion—he made the same statement twice—to discount reports of an imminent Nazi move, directed at Poland.

"His majesty's government," he said, "have no official confirmation of the rumor of any projected attack on Poland, and they must not, therefore, be taken as accepting them as true."

Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the Labor opposition, asked whether the prime minister's declaration was the first step in a policy "to deter and restrain" aggression, and whether the government would take "energetic steps" to bring other powers, including Soviet Russia, into the arrangement, with a view to obtaining "the maximum amount of co-operation in defense of peace."

In reply, Chamberlain said:

"The government is in consultation with various foreign powers, including, of course, the Soviet Government. The foreign secretary saw the Soviet Ambassador this morning and had a very full discussion with him and I have no doubt that the principles on which we are acting are fully understood and appreciated by that government.

"We are expecting a visit next week from Col. Beck, the Polish foreign minister. There will then be opportunity of discussing with him the various further measures that may be taken to accumulate the maximum amount of co-operation in any efforts that may be made to put an end to aggression, if aggression were intended, and substitute for it the more reasonable and orderly methods of discussions."

Chamberlain said the dominions were being kept fully informed as to the various steps in the elaboration of the new foreign policy and it is known that care is being taken to keep the United States government in close touch with developments. Ambassador Kennedy is understood to have been informed of the tenor of Chamberlain's declaration soon before it was made.

Though in his declaration, Chamberlain made no qualifications regarding such territories as Danzig and the Polish Corridor, there is much speculation here tonight as to whether the guaranty extends to these areas. The prevailing view is that in the end the British givernment expects Danzig to go to Germany through a negotiated agreement. The situation with respect to the Corridor, which belonged to Germany until Versailles, is much more vague.

Obviously, from his remarks today, Chamberlain still hopes that the outstanding differences between Germany and Poland can be liquidated through negotiation.

Soviet Officials Wary

Moscow, March 31 (U.P.).—Informed Soviet quarters said tonight Russia welcomes "joint measures to secure peace" such as the new Anglo-French pledge of military aid to Poland but were wary of predicting whether Moscow would join in the guarantee.

The government refused to comment pending receipt and study of the official text of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's statement before the British House of Commons.

Europe's Face Today as England Acts to 'Stop Hitler'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Map shows today's line-up in Europe with Great Britain pledged to fight for Poland if the latter's independence is menaced. Hitler promised to speak in answer today. A sore spot between Germany and Poland is the Polish Corridor. High sources indicated that Poland would dicker with Germany over the Free City of Danzig

Text of Chamberlain's Statement

London, March 31.—The text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons today follows:

I am glad to take this opportunity of stating again the general policy of his majesty's government. They have constantly advocated the adjustment by way of free negotiation between the parties concerned of any differences that may arise between them. They consider that this is the natural and proper course where differences exist.

In their opinion there should be no question incapable of solution by peaceful means and they would see no justification for the substitution of force or threats of force for the method of negotiation.

As the House is aware, certain consultations are now proceeding with other governments.

In order to make perfectly clear the position of his majesty's government, in the meantime, before those consultations are concluded I now have to inform the House that during that period, in the event of any action which clearly threatened Polish independence and which the Polish government accordingly considered it vital to resist with their national forces, his majesty's government would feel themselves bound at once to lend the Polish government all support in their power.

They have given the Polish government an assurance to this effect.

I may add that the French government have authorized me to make it plain that they stand in the same position in this matter as do his majesty's government.

The foreign secretary saw the Soviet ambassador this morning and had a very full discussion with him on the subject.

I have no doubt the principles on which we are acting are fully understood and appreciated by that government.

The visit of Col. Beck will provide an opportunity of discussing with him the various measures that may be taken in order to accumulate the maximum amount of co-operation in any efforts that may be made to put an end to aggression—if aggression were intended—and to substitute for it the more reasonable and orderly method of discussion.

The question of a conference is simply a matter of expediency. We have no theoretical views about conferences if they prove to be the best way.

If there are other and more effective ways of achieving our object we might dispense with conferences.

The Dominions are being kept fully informed.

Franco to Keep Army of Million, Madrid Hears

Madrid, March 31 (AP).—Gen. Franco was expected by informed sources tonight to keep his army of more than 1,000,000 men on its present basis probably until the end of the year.

These sources said the soldiers would be released gradually to public life as agriculture and industry return to normal.

In Madrid, the reconsecration of the city's 200 churches, some of which served during the 33-month civil war as republican munitions depots, was started. It was announced more than 20 churches would be reconsecrated during holy week.

Experts Think Reich Is Near Bankruptcy

Germany

Germany is headed toward economic collapse and Hitler, as a result, may decide to risk a war.

By issuing tax certificates, it is pointed out, Germany, in order to pay her debts, has begun building up a vast amount of claims against future tax collections.

Dr. Walther Funk, who succeeded Dr. Hjalmar Schacht in January as president of the Reichsbank, announced Thursday that the private capital market was being abandoned to private borrowers. The market, he admitted, had been seriously depressed by the issuance of long-term government securities, but use of tax certificates as a financial device would give it a long breathing spell.

Lid Held on Prices

Resort to these certificates, it is said, may throw some light on Schacht's resignation. Speculation is that Schacht may have pointed to outright currency inflation as the only course. Experts believe that Hitler, fearful of the reaction of the German public to such a step, may have called in Funk to formulate alternatives.

Tax certificates are to be poured out as Germany continues on her desperate course, while the Nazi regime holds down the lid on prices by its policy of strict control.

But the consequences of a glut of these new certificates cannot be escaped, it is said. The fact that business concerns must acept this kind of paper promise for 40 per cent of their government bills will make it increasingly difficult for them to meet pay rolls. Some authorities believe economic collapse may overtake Germany within six months.

I. O. U.'s Put Out

Last April, it is recalled, Germany began issuing delivery bills as a financing device. These bills were taken up to some extent by tax collections. Large amounts were refunded, however, into long-term securities. There were several of these consolidation loans, but the second loan offered after the Munich pact failed. The absorptive powers of German banks, insurance companies and similar institutions had reached a limit.

of military support "will not alter principles on which Polish policy has been based in the past. Poland will seek good relations with her neighbors and settlement of all questions in a friendly manner."

With Polish armament factories working 24 hours a day, it was learned Poland's armed forces now number more than 1,000,000 regulars and reserves and may be strengthened further by financial aid from Britain and raw materials from Soviet Russia.

Credits Reported

Reports said Britain was likely to grant a large credit, automatically renewable, to the Bank of Poland. Another large credit may be arranged to furnish Poland with airplane motors.

A Soviet-Polish trade treaty, which a Russian delegation in Warsaw now is discussing, may be expanded to include wholesale furnishing of materials from the Soviet Union's vast resources.

Warsaw sources said a formal military alliance with Britain probably would be negotiated when Foreign Minister Joseph Beck goes to London. He is scheduled to leave Sunday and arrive in London Monday.

There were indications a defensive alliance between Poland and Lithuania, now under consideration, might be hastened to conclusion.

Foreign office comment said "the British government's statement proves that it has decided peace is indivisible in Europe and that peace must be assured in the east if there is to be peace in the west."

Senate Votes 40 Million for War Supplies

$2,000,000 Provided For Research; Home Industry Favored

Rounding out the emergency defense program, the Senate yesterday initiated action to make the United States economically self-secure in time of war.

Legislation authorizing acquisition of a $40,000,000 reserve of strategic war materials was approved after three days of debate, during which the fund was cut from $100,000,000 under Administration pressure.

Under the bill essential raw products not produced in sufficient quantities in this country, such as manganese, tin and rubber, would be stored for use by the Army, Navy and industry in a war emergency.

Also in the bill are provisions to stimulate domestic production of materials in which the United States is deficient. The "buy American act," giving preference over foreign products, is applied to the program, and domestic producers are given up to a year's delay in meeting orders. Bond can be waived as to such firms when officials determine that development of deposits is economically feasible.

$2,000,000 for Research

In addition to the authorization to spend $10,000,000 annually for four years for actual stores, the measure provides an additional $500,000 a year for a like period for research. With these funds the Bureau of Mines and the Geological Survey would investigate new deposits, new methods of treating low-grade minerals, and possible substitutes.

The measure now goes to the House, where a similar measure, providing the full $100,000,000 awaits action.

Before the Senate met yesterday, its Military Affairs Committee approved two bills to safeguard secret arms equipment and permit purchase of new developments abroad. The measures would waive existing law requiring advertising and purchasing by competitive bid as to aircraft, ordnance, signal and chemical warfare equipment, parts and instruments.

Chemical Warfare Show

Other developments were:

A demonstration of what may be expected in the way of gas warfare will be given by the Army at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., April 7, the War Department revealed. While heretofore the Army has soft-pedaled talk of chemical warfare, it yesterday invited the press and photographers to attend a showing of latest gas and smoke weapons and protective devices, to be held for the American Chemical Society.

The Navy Department announced award of a $321,529 order for airplanes to the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. of Long Island City, N.Y.

The House Interstate Commerce Committee neared action on the last phase of the President's emergency defense program, a measure to train 20,0000 civilian air pilots as a "backlog of national defense." Members said the bill would be reported early next week.

Coast Guard Expansion

A group of House members prepared to leave here this morning on an aerial inspection trip of proposed naval air bases in the Caribbean.

Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, former Chief of Army Engineers, told the Senate Commerce Committee that the proposed $200,000,000 Florida ship canal would aid national defense. His successor, the present Army Engineer chief, Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, however, declined to express an opinion on the project before the group.

The House Merchant Marine Committee favorably reported a bill to expand the Coast Guard as a defense measure. The service would be allowed three rear admirals instead of one and a 20 per cent increase in commissioned strength under the measure.

Will Be 6-Day Junket

The House delegation, most of them members of the Naval Affairs Committee, will fly to Jacksonville and Miami in two Navy planes and then jump in rapid succession to Guantanamo, Cuba; San Juan and Ponce, Puerto Rico, and Charlotte Amalie, Virgin Islands. During the six-day trip, the group plans to inspect naval base locations recommended by a recent special Navy board.

Those making the flight include Representatives Sutphin, of New Jersey; Casey, of Massachusetts; Jacobsen, of Iowa; Darden, of Virginia; Fay, of New York; Mouton, of Louisiana, all Democrats; Bates, of Massachusetts; Hess, of Ohio; Cole, of New York, and Maas, of Minnesota, Republicans, and Robert Harper, clerk of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Skeleton Believed That of Lost Flier

Detroit, March 31 (U.P.).—Discovery of a skeleton on a Cape Cod (Mass.) beach was believed today to have solved the disappearance of Davis Smith, missing since he took off in his rebuilt airplane for an unannounced destination last June 29.

Smith was believed to have attempted to emulate Douglas Corrigan by flying unannounced to Ireland. When he left the Wayne County Airport his plane carried 350 gallons of fuel. Friends said he often had expressed the desire to attempt a transatlantic flight.

26 High-Ranking Officers Shifted by Navy Department

Navy Shake-up Transfers 22 Rear Admirals, 4 Captains; Closely Follows Stark's Promotion

Secretary of the Navy Swanson last night announced an extensive shift in the Navy high command, involving transfer of 22 rear admirals and 4 captains to new assignments.

The move follows closely on the heels of the appointment of Rear Admiral Harold R. Stark as chief of naval operations, effective in June, and brings changes in the principal posts on his staff here as well as important commands at sea.

President Roosevelt reached far down the list of the Navy's admirals in selecting Stark, and the same rule was followed in choosing his principal assistants. However, more seasoned officers were selected to command the Atlantic and European squadrons.

Rear Admiral Charles E. Courtney, now director of naval communications here, and a senior flag officer, will command the squadron which has operated in European waters since the Spanish War started. His assignment is an indication that the Administration intends to make the temporary squadron now in Europe a permanent post, in the opinion of some officers.

Ghormley Made Assistant

Command of the newly created Atlantic Squadron goes to Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, former director of naval intelligence and now commandant of the Ninth Naval District at Chicago.

Three junior rear admirals and a captain were named as Admiral Stark's assistants. The important post of assistant chief of naval operations goes to Rear Admiral Robert Ghormley, promoted to flag rank only last December, and now director of war plans.

Rear Admiral Walter S. Anderson, naval attache to Great Britain from 1934 to 1937 and now in command of a cruiser division, becomes Director of Naval Intelligence, while Rear Admiral Herbert F. Leary, chief of staff, United States Fleet, will be Director of Fleet Training.

Capt. Leigh Noyes, chief of staff, Aircraft, Battle Force, will relieve Admiral Courtney as Director of Naval Communications.

Other Assignments

Other assignments were:

Rear Admiral William S. Pye, commander, Destroyer Flotilla One, to be commander, Destroyers, Battle Force. He will relieve Rear Admiral Walton R. Sexton, who comes here to duty with the General Board.

Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmell, commander, Cruiser Division 7, Scouting Force, to be commander, Cruisers, Battle Force. He relieves Admiral Stark.

Rear Admiral Ralston S. Holmes, present Director of Naval Intelligence, will be assigned as commander of destroyer flotilla one, battle force, relieving Admiral Pye.

Rear Admiral John H. Newton, now attending the Naval War College, will take command of the cruiser division 4, relieving Admiral Anderson.

Rear Admiral Andrew C. Pickens, now here with the General Board, will command cruiser division 7.

Capt. Robert A. Theobald was selected as Admiral Leary's successor as chief of staff of the commander-in-chief of the U. S. Fleet. He is now in command of the battleship Nevada.

Capt. Arthur L. Bristol, who now commands the naval air station at San Diego, Calif., will be commander of patrol wing 2, aircraft, scouting force, based at Pearl Harbor, Honolulu. He will relieve Capt. Kenneth Whiting, whose new assignment has not been determined.

Smeallie to Philippines

Read Adm. John M. Smeallie, until recently chief of staff to commander, scouting force, will be commandant of the Sixteenth Naval District, embracing the Philippines, and commandant of the Cavite Navy Yard.

The present Philippine area commander, Rear Adm. George J. Meyers, will become commander of the base force, relieving Read Adm. William C. Watts, who will take over Admiral Ellis's post at Chicago.

Rear Adm. Alfred W. Johnson, now in command of the Atlantic Squadron, will be ordered to duty with the general board, and Rear Adm. Henry E. Lackey, present commander the squadron in Europe, will be president, general court-martial, Third Naval District.

Rear Admiral Joseph R. Defrees, director of the shore establishments division at the Navy Department and former commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, will relieve Rear Admiral Sinclair Gannon in command of the naval district operating base at San Diego, Calif. Admiral Gannon becomes senior member of the Pacific section of the Board of Inspection and Survey.

Rear Admiral George F. Neal, who Admiral Gannon will relieve, will probably be assigned as president of the general court-martial, San Francisco, a post now held by Rear Admiral Walter R. Gherardi. The latter retires September 1.

The present assistant chief of naval operations, Rear Admiral Arthur P. Fairfield, will relieve Rear Admiral John D. Wainwright as commander of Battleship Division 3, and the latter will come to duty with the General Board.

France Condemns De Koven Slayers

Versailles, France, March 31 (U.P.).—Eugene Weidmann, magnet-eyed German, and Roger Million, 35-year-old gigolo, were sentenced to the guillotine tonight for the murders of six persons, including Jean de Koven, 22-year-old New York dancer.

As court adjourned Million shouted hoarsely:

"I insist I am innocent."

The audience booed.

The jury freed Colette Tricot, brunette mistress of Million.

Besides the De Koven slaying, Weidmann was convicted of the murders of Roger le Blond, theatrical agent; Mrs. Jeanne Keller, governess; Arthur Frommer, salesman; Raymond le Sobre and Joseph Couffy.

Million was found guilty of the murders of Le Blond and Mrs. Keller.

The jury found Jean Blanc, minor hanger-on of the murder ring, guilty of harboring criminals.

Dr. MacDonald said Lovett had swallowed a quantity of carbon tetrachloride cleaning fluid while syphoning the liquid out of a drum 10 days ago at Winchester, Va.

House to Start Neutrality Study Tuesday

Day Ahead of Senate; Fish Would Ban Arms Sales to Belligerents

Hearings on the various neutrality bills now before Congress will be opposed in the House Tuesday, one day before they are scheduled to begin in the Senate.

Representative Bloom, of New York, acting chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said yesterday that "anybody who wants to can appear at the hearings," which, he indicated, would be concluded within a week. Bloom said that he expected Secretary of State Hull to testify.

Latest of the neutrality bills to be introduced in the House was filed yesterday by Representative Fish, of New York, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee. It would prohibit sale and shipment of arms or extension of credit to all belligerent nations and would also provide that American citizens, as in the present law, shall travel on ships of belligerents at their own risk.

For the cash-and-carry provisions of the current law, which expire May 1, the Fish bill declares that American ships carrying contraband such as copper, cotton, scrap iron and even foodstuffs to belligerents would do so at the risk of shipowners.

The present cash-and-carry provision, said Fish, "discriminates in an intolerable and unfair manner against American shipping and in favor of those nations which control the seas, such as Great Britain and Japan."

Cathedral Choir Boys Rehearse for Holy Week

Catholic, Lutheran and Methodist Rites Friday Will Highlight Observances of Holy Week Here

Three Good Friday services—Catholic, Lutheran and Methodist—will highlight religious observances during Holy Week here. They are the "Everybody's Good Friday Service" sponsored by the Catholic Evidence Guild; a three-hour devotional program sponsored by the Lutheran Ministerial Association of Washington, and another three-hour service under auspices of the Methodist Union.

The Catholic observance will be held, weather permitting, in Franklin Park, Fourteenth and K streets northwest, from 3 to 5 p. m. It initiates the annual series of outdoor religious forums sponsored in the park every Sunday, beginning with Easter, by the guild.

A feature of the Good Friday program will be meditation on the 14 stations of the Ways of the Cross. A vested choir from Catholic University will sing the Requiem Mass, the Stabat Mater and music of the Mass of the Presanctified, together with popular hymns.

Dr. Charles Hart, of Catholic University, will be general director, assisted by the Rev. A. J. Burgraff, C. S. P., superior of St. Paul's College; the Rev. Clement Breen, O. P., Dominican House of Studies, and the Rev. Mark Kennedy, O. F. M., Holy Name Society. Parts of the program will be broadcast through local stations.

The Lutheran ministers' observance will be held at the Church of the Reformation, with the Rev. E. G. Goetz, Zion Lutheran pastor, serving as liturgist, assisted by the Rev. G. G. Grewnenow, of Faith Church, Arlington.

Meditations on the seven words Christ spoke from the cross will be delivered by Dr. Carl Rasmussen, Luther Place pastor; the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, of Atonement Church; the Rev. Howard E. Beatty, of Georgetown; Dr. A. O. Hjelm, of Augustana; Dr. G. E. Lenski, of Grace; the Rev. Harold Mumper, of Keller Memorial, and the Rev. R. W. Loew, assistant pastor of the host church.

Also beginning at noon, the Methodist union service at Foundry Church will be addressed by Dr. E. C. Beery, presiding elder of the Southern Methodist Church; Dr. R. W. White, Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Protestant minister; Dr. O. J. Hart, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church; the Rev. O. G. Robinson, Calvary Methodist minister; Dr. J. M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University; Dr. W. S. Abernethy, Calvary Baptist minister, and Dr. H. W. Burgan, Hamline Methodist minister. Dr. G. Ellis Williams will preside and music will be furnished by the Foundry choir, directed by Justin Lawrie, with V. E. Slater as organist.

On Thursday at 2:15 p. m. the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Washington district of the Methodist Church will hold its Easter thank offering service in Calvary Methodist Church.

Dr. Peter Marshall, minister of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will speak; the Rev. Orris G. Robinson, host pastor, will have charge of the devotions, and Mrs. Harry Woolever, missionary society president, of the litany. Mrs. G. Ellis Williams will preside. Louis A. Potter, of the host church, will give an organ recital.

Friday there will be a Tre Ore service at St. Dominic's Catholic Church, to begin with the solemn Mass of the Presanctified at noon. During this mass, only one of its kind celebrated throughout the year, the Passion will be solemnly sung by three Dominican fathers.

Following the Mass of the Presanctified will be the Adoration of the Cross; short meditations on the Seven Last Words, and the service will conclude with the Stations of the Cross. A special musical program has been arranged.

Tenebrae services will be held at St. Dominic's on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, beginning at 8 o'clock, chanted by 30 fathers and novices from the Dominican House of Studies. On Wednesday, after the Tenebrae service, Father Bernard McKeon will preach on "The Betrayal;" on Thursday Father Norbert Connell will deliver a sermon on "Eucharistic Friendship," and on Friday evening Father C. A. Musselman will speak on "The Passion."

The Rev. Spence Burton, S. S. J. E., father superior general of the Society of St. John the Evangelist and Bishop Suffragan-elect of Haiti, will conduct three hours of devotion in Christ Church, Georgetown, on Good Friday from 12 noon to 3 p. m.

Bishop Littell To Preach at Cathedral

Missionary From Honolulu to Speak At 11 A. M. Service

Final preparations have been made at Washington Cathedral to welcome large numbers of worshipers and pilgrims at Palm Sunday services tomorrow.

At Holy Communion at 11 a. m. the Rt. Rev. S. Harrington Littell, S. T. D., missionary bishop of Honolulu, will preach. The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D. LL.D., bishop of Washington, will give a brief address at the choral evensong at 4 o'clock, when a special program of sixteenth century motets will be sung by the Cathedral Choir.

For the special music the choir will go to the gallery of the north transept, after which there will be an explanatory introduction to the motets by the Rev. William M. Bradner, canon precentor of the Cathedral.

The sixteenth century Lenten music, sung under the direction of Robert Barrow, will emphasize in particular the Tudor composers. Included in the program will be the "Ave Verum" of William Byrd and the motet "Sing Unto the Lord" and "O Lord, Increase My Faith," by Christopher Tye and Orlando Gibbons respectively. These three men, as well as the other composers represented on this occasion, were all Cathedral organists in their time. The Cathedral therefore affords a peculiarly appropriate setting for the rendition of music by this type.

Delegates for the province convention of the Delta Gamma Woman's Fraternity will attend the morning service in a body, and afterward will have a pilgrimage through the Cathedral and the Bishop's Garden.

Holy Communion will be celebrated in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Holy Nativity tomorrow at 7:30 a. m. and 9:30 a. m. The Bishop's Garden will be open from 12 noon to 2 p. m.

Holy Week services in the Cathedral will be as follows: Holy Communion, daily at 7:30 a. m. except on Good Friday, in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Holy Nativity; noonday intercessions at 12 noon and evening prayer at 4 o'clock with special addresses on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Canon Bradner will conclude his addresses on Tuesday afternoon on "The Hymnal As an Aid to Devotions" with music by the choir boys; Canon Anson Phelps Stokes ends his series on "The Beatitudes" on Wednesday; and Thursday will mark the end of Canon Edward Slater Dunlap's addresses on "New Apprehensions."

Bishop Freeman will conduct the Three-Hour of Passion Service on Good Friday from 12 noon to 3 o'clock.

Church of the Week

'Everyone Is Trying to Help' Temple Baptist Youth Center

Last Saturday the Chevy Chase Presbyterians' contribution to the Center was outlined. The Temple Baptists' part in the project is described today

In launching the "Happy Hour" in the spring of 1936, the Rev. Randolph Gregory and his Temple Baptist parishioners laid the groundwork for one of Washington's most unique child welfare enterprises—the Temple Recreation Center at Tenth and N street northwest.

There, in rooms used for devotionals on Sundays, scores of youngsters meet daily under capable leadership to enjoy a health-building, character-moulding and initiative-developing program, springing from a conviction that the church must carry its spiritual message into the social life of such midtown areas.

"CHAMP" KEYS

Aided by members of the Alathean Class of Temple, who underwrite the purchase of a movie machine, and other parishioners, the Rev. Mr. Gregory began the "Happy Hour," which today, under the guidance of the B. Y. P. U., continues its original purpose—to provide a weekly hour of entertainment for neighborhood children. Mrs. Ruth Horner is Alathean teacher.

Leaders of the "Hour" are staunch supporters of Mrs. Martha Dudley in her supervisory work at Temple Center. They are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Braugh, Mr. and Mrs. Warren P. Horner, Harry and Jane Newby, Harold Bacon and others. The men's class also is active in the projects.

Characteristic of the resourcefulness-developing activities at the Temple Center, launched last summer through co-operative efforts of churches, social agencies and interested citizens, is the woodcraft class, supervised by Richard Bush, physical education student at George Washington University.

HORNER (a leader)

Lacking space and equipment—but neither enthusiasm nor determination, the lads "hammer and saw away" on Tuesdays and Thursdays after school hours in their shop near the furnace room of the church, turning out birdhouses and other products.

According to Mrs. Martha Dudley and her assistant, Mrs. Albert A. Fenderson, the embryonic carpenters are hoping for better facilities later. Mrs. Fenderson was appointed January 1 by the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, which she attends and which underwrites the Center. It also furnishes many volunteer leaders.

The woodwork class, it is whispered, plans to construct a magazine rack for Mrs. Dudley when better tools are available. Most needed at present are saws, hammers and lumber.

Outstanding among the Center's human products is 19-year-old John Lee "Champ" Keys, volunteer sports coach, who has endeared himself to the younger "kids" and leaders since he dropped in some time ago.

"The youngsters think the world of him," said the Rev. Mr. Gregory yesterday, explaining that "Champ" is being awarded a scholarship to a local college for serving on the Jewish Community Center's boxing team. Eventually he hopes to become a full-fledged physical education instructor. Recently reunited with his parents, from whom he became separated years ago, he lives near the center.

Praising the "splendid support" of various agencies and individuals, the pastor said that "it seems as if everyone has been trying to help us," pointing out that the National City Christian Church furnishes use of its Vermont avenue annex for basketball and other games, and the Jewish Community Center its swimming pool on Fridays.

He also emphasized that neighborhood parishes, in addition to supplying volunteer help, also are contributing garments for the "clothes closet," a department filling a definite need in the community. Mothers of the Center's habitues mend and alter the articles at home and in their sewing club.

Other interesting phases of the program are the children's sewing group; cooking, drama, music and sketch clubs; Girls Scout troop, and the "Blues Eagles' Club," the latter just organized and which "roosts" on the top floor of the building.

Weekley trips to hospital clinics; consultation service for families of the neighborhood; baseball and other sports on the nearby lot donated last summer by Hugh Rielly; hikes into the country, and numerous other activities keep the center humming.

A Justified Rebuke

President Roosevelt's threat to veto the pending bill providing for reciprocal taxation of incomes of Federal and State employes if it carries a tariff rider is fully justified. Even if the proposed tariff changes were desirable, the attempt to secure their adoption by attaching them to other legislation is indefensible.

According to the President's letter, moreover, the increases proposed would raise the duties on certain vegetable fats and oils to prohibitively high levels, having the effect of an embargo. Enactment of such duties would make it necessary to modify a number of important reciprocal trade agreements, thus inviting retaliation and jeopardizing the whole program.

The force of the President's protest against interference with the Hull program is unfortunately weakened, however, by his own advocacy of an export subsidy for cotton. Artificial stimuli to exporting result in different kinds of disturbances from those caused by sharp increases in tariffs. But export subsidies also invite retaliation and interfere with the normal expansion of trade through removal of barriers to intercourse.

Leaving out of the question the merits of the demand for increased protection of oils and fats, another unsettled issue is brought sharply to the fore by the President's protest. What scope is left for tariff revision by Congressional action since passage of the trade agreements act? The President rightly points out that if Congress desires to change tariff schedules it should study proposals on their merits with the aid of experts from the Tariff Commission and other agencies. However the further the Administration proceeds with its trade agreements program the more difficult it will become to effect changes that do not necessitate modifications of trade pacts.

Judging from the President's attitude and that of Secretary Hull, forced revision of the trade pacts because of any action Congress might take would be deeply resented and bitterly fought.

Tax-Exempt Judges

The forthright manner in which the Supreme Court has eliminated tax immunities for State and Federal employes should lead to a re-examination of the status of Federal judges' salaries. Under a decision handed down in 1920 income taxes cannot be applied to the compensation of judges appointed before the tax was levied. That opinion rests upon the same sort of loose, generalized reasoning which the court discarded this week in deciding the O'Keefe case.

Under the Constitution, judges' salaries cannot be diminished during their continuance in office. The reason for that provision is obvious. It was not intended to relieve judges of paying their just share of taxes essential to support the Government of which they are a part. Its only purpose was to protect them against legislative discipline and thus to encourage complete independence of judgment on the bench. Nevertheless, the court held in Evans vs. Gore that to levy a tax upon a judge's salary was equivalent to diminishing it within the meaning of the Constitution.

Judges appointed since the enactment of the 1932 revenue law pay taxes just as other citizens do. But all other jurists escape payment of their reasonable share of Governmental expenses. That discrimination alone is sufficient reason to seek a re-examination of the logic behind the 1920 ruling. Fortunately, the Department of Justice has already asked the court to review a case involving this issue.

Tax immunity for Federal and State employes was swept away because the Supreme Court, reviewing the fundamental principle at stake, saw that no such discrimination in favor of public servants was essential to safeguard our dual system of government. It went back to the Constitution itself, instead of automatically relying upon judicial concepts that have grown out of the Constitution under circumstances very different from those prevailing today. That is precisely the kind of constructive constitutional interpretation the country needs.

By following the same logic, it appears that the court would be almost inevitably led to discard the assumption that a nondiscriminatory tax diminishes a judge's salary. As pointed out by James Quarles in a discussion of this subject in The Post last May 1, no one supposes for a moment that the judges paying income taxes are less independent in the discharge of their official duties than those who are still exempt. It is difficult to imagine the present court deciding that a judge's ability to mete out justice may be impaired by requiring him to meet his civic obligations.

Every time a vacancy occurs in the Federal judicial system a tax-exempt judgeship is eliminated. But that is a slow process. This obviously desirable reform might be greatly hastened by presenting the issue once more to the Supreme Court.

New Bars To Aggression

For some years Great Britain's foreign policy has been predicated on the assumption that, as Stanley Baldwin put it, England's frontier is the Rhine. In other words, the defense of Great Britain against external aggression involves, as a matter of necessity, the defense of France as well.

Until yesterday, however, the French alliance represented the absolute limit of British commitments on the continent of Europe. Great Britain could not, of course, be indifferent to the fate of nations east of the Rhine and her statesmen often said so. But the London government always stopped short of any promises to act on behalf of central or Eastern European nations that might be struck down by aggressor powers.

For this reason Prime Minister Chamberlain's forthright pledge of assistance to Poland, should that nation be attacked by Nazi Germany, constitutes something like a revolution in British policy. The frontiers of the kingdom have now been pushed from the Rhine to the Vistula.

Thus, Adolf Hitler is now under notice that an attempt by him to overrun Poland, as previously he has overrun Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, will mean war and war in which the combined forces of Poland, France, Great Britain and possibly other countries will be hurled against him. The British stand cannot but make him pause.

In the meantime his ally, Mussolini, is also running up against obstacles in the effort to obtain large-scale concessions from France by means of threats and blustering. Far from being intimidated, Premier Daladier in his speech of Wednesday showed plainly that he and his government propose to stand firm. "We will not cede a foot of our land nor one of our rights," said M. Daladier.

Thus the lines in Europe are being drawn, between Italy and France on the one hand and between Germany and the European democracies on the other. Both the British and the French governments are apparently determined to retreat no further. This courageous stand is the most salutary turn the European situation has taken in recent months.

It is true that M. Daladier's pronouncement has produced an answering blast from Mussolini to the effect that Italy does not intend to remain "a prisoner in the Mediterranean," while in Berlin Nazi spokesmen declare that "the Fuehrer will not be frightened by a British prime minister." Yet it is extremely doubtful whether either Germany or Italy are in any sense prepared to plunge Europe into war.

The successes they have secured in the field of foreign policy have been largely the result of intimidation. The positive action of both London and Paris now indicates that the limits of that policy have been reached.

Advice To The South

It is apparent from President Roosevelt's address at Auburn, Ala., that he is still very much interested in the welfare of the South. But his view as to the most effective means of developing the great potential resources of the Southern States seems to have undergone a significant change.

The President had previously referred to the South as "the Nation's No. 1 economic problem." While that remark probably stimulated a great deal of constructive thinking as to the plight of many Southern communities, it also aroused in the hearts of some Southerners a sense of injured pride. In the speech at Auburn that unfortunate note was entirely absent. With the skill of a trained psychologist, the President suggested to the South that it take upon itself the initiative in developing a new and better balanced economy.

At Barnesville, last August, the President laid greater stress upon action by the Federal Government to elevate the South to a higher economic plane. Most of the problems of that section, he said, involve interstate relationships. "It is not an attack on State sovereignty," the President continued, "to point out that this national aspect of all these problems requires action by the Federal Government."

National action is certainly essential to correct some of the discrimination to which the South has been subjected. But the President probably realizes more keenly than he did last August that the scope of governmental activity in an undertaking of this sort is rather definitely limited. At any rate, he now shifts the chief responsibility to the South itself—more specifically to the youth of that region.

The President now says that achievement of the more abundant life for the South means "a lot of hard work." "It means, incidentally," he continued, "getting the South out of hock to the North. It means establishing your own enterprises down here with your own capital. I don't believe that the South is so broke that it cannot put its own capital into the establishment of its own enterprises." Such initiative, energy and determination on the part of the South will be worth more than all the benefits which a generous and indulgent government might bestow upon that section.

No doubt the President has been especially impressed by the desirability of securing new industries in the South since the cotton dilemma left on his doorstep by the AAA has become so acute. With foreign markets for American cotton seriously shrinking, with machinery displacing an ever larger number of agricultural workers, the necessity of diverting a considerable portion of the people of the South into other industries is greatly emphasized.

In this instance, however, the Administration has magnified a grave problem of the South instead of solving it. Desirable though it is to seek a diversification of industry in the South, there is little that can be said for a policy that increasingly narrows the field in which the chief industry of that region may operate.

Reminder To Dr. Funk

Dr. Walther Funk, the successor of Dr. Schacht as president of the Reichsbank, warns the world not to "immolate itself on the altar of the American golden Moloch." Gold, he says, is "flowing irresistibly into the glutted coffers of the United States," leaving the Old World with "its currencies tottering and its balance sheets shaken."

One would infer from the tone of these remarks that the United States had by insidious machinations drained the hapless countries of Europe of their monetary supplies merely to pile up vast hoards of the yellow metal like a gloating miser. Dr. Funk conveniently forgets that among the major factors accountable for the great influx of gold in recent years, and especially in recent months, are the recurrent war scares that have caused foreign capital to seek the comparative safety of our shores. During the first half of 1938 a large volume of short-term foreign balances was withdrawn from the United States and the gold inflow contemporaneously declined. With development of the Sudeten crisis, however, foreign balances again started this way on an unprecedented scale and in the short period of two months we acquired over $1,000,000,000 of gold. Dr. Funk may give a large part of the credit for that performance to his chief, Herr Hitler. For it was the fear of war created by the aggressive assaults on Czecho-Slovakia that reversed the flow of funds and accelerated the gold movement in this direction.

On the day that Dr. Funk was hurling his thunderbolt at this country the port of New York received the largest single cargo of gold ever reported. Dr. Funk may not be willing to acknowledge any connection between this shipment and recent events in Europe, including the seizure of gold from Czecho-Slovakia's central bank. But the frightened Europeans who fear their country may be the next victim as well as those who are alarmed at the prospect of a general conflagration plainly see the relationship of cause and effect.

The United States, instead of being an object of envy because of the abnormally heavy gold inflow, deserves to be commiserated. For the situation created by this steady acquisition of gold is fraught with danger. It forces nations deprived of gold to resort to all sorts of devious expedients to finance trade; it postpones indefinitely restoration of the gold standard in international dealings; and it helps to build up in this country a huge volume of excess reserves having dangerous inflationary potentialities. Moreover, it enables foreigners to acquire valuable claims to property and securities in exchange for a metal whose prestige as a means of payment and a standard of value is being progressively impaired because of its maldistribution.

Peace in Europe—and such peace is not to be expected so long as the Hitler regime pursues its terroristic policies—would provide a basis for financial stability and thus help to put an end to the mass flights of capital which are causing perpetual disturbances. As the Federal Reserve Board said in a recent bulletin: "Should the European situation become more stable, the great mass of idle foreign funds in this country earning no interest might easily be attracted into more essential and profitable uses at home. These funds constitute the most unpredictable of the major factors governing the international exchanges and the flow of gold into the United States."

"What will Japan ultimately take from China?" someone asks. China.

Nearly all the nations, it seems, have gone off the golden-rule standard.

Underprivileged Turkey

From the Pleasant Hill (Mo.) Times

The editor of the Garden City Views used the term, "as poor as Job's turkey." Then he admitted he knew very little, if anything, about Job or how poor his turkey was, and said that information on that score would be gladly received. Well, here it is: Mrs. H. E. Deshazer, Pleasant Hill, says Job's turkey was so poor it had to lean against a fence to gobble. This information, Mrs. Deshazer admits, she gained in Sunday school (although not a part of the lesson) 50 years ago.

Bishop Brent

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The memorial services held in New York and to be held in Washington in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the death of Bishop Charles Henry Brent recall the very pleasant and stimulating acquaintance I had with him during my service of nearly five years as assistant to the attorney general of the Philippines.

While Bishop of the Philippines he was instrumental in the building of a very beautiful Episcopal Cathedral in Manila, which I attended often, and listened with profit to his interesting and scholarly dissertations on the things of the spirit. Hardly any American in the islands exercised so great and wholesome an influence among and upon the natives as did the good bishop.

It will be remembered by many veterans that he was chief chaplain in the A. E. F. Thereafter he served as Bishop of Western New York. In all these places his unusual combination of gentleness and force won for him a host of friends. His tolerance was all-embracing. Modest and self-effacing, he yet was a born leader of men, which is why all Filipinos, and, of course, all Americans who came into contact with him were devoted to him.

Want of space precludes a full statement of his activities and beneficent work in the Philippines, which will ever remain a lasting memorial to him and an influence for good among those peoples that will never die.

While he was perfectly at home with those of exalted station his sympathies and comprehending mind embraced those in the most humble stations of life, and, like the Master, in whose footsteps he followed, he consorted with the outcasts and downtrodden of humanity that he might brighten and lighten the burdens of their lives and lead them into the ways of the better life.

His special interest and care in the Philippines were the hill peoples like the Bontoks, Ifuagos, and Igorots, and the Mohometans in the southernmost islands, among whom he exerted a great and beneficial influence.

With the passing of the good bishop heaven gained a saint and the world lost a knightly gentleman. ALEXANDER S. LANIER.

On Taxing War Profits

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It's a rank injustice! Dorothy Thompson is absolutely right in her tirade against Senator Bone's war-profits tax bill.

Before reading her article I thought that it was the soldier who suffered in war, but now my heart bleeds for the poor fellow who is going to have his $20,000-a-year income cut to $8,774.

What right does the Government have to cut this inoffensive chap's coffee money down so low that he might have to dismiss a servant, or even worse, move into a cheaper apartment?

How can anyone possibly justify cutting his income to the point where he might have to dress and shave himself, and thus become acquainted first hand with the horrors of war?

Why should he have to suffer more than the soldier, who is handed an outright gift of at least $30 a month less, of course, deductions for insurance, allotments for wife and children, liberty loan payments and payments for such items of equipment as he is unlucky enough to lose.

For all these privileges the soldier is not expected to work more than 24 hours a day. And sometimes he is even given shelter from the weather. Of course, killing and being killed should not be mentioned as those are normal activities for a soldier and not to be discussed or compared with the hardship that Mr. $20,000-a-year would have to undergo if it became necessary that he drive his own car.

Maybe I am wrong but I had the impression that when the United States went to war it was for a cause, and that the object was to reestablish an honorable peace, and that for such cause and object every American was to work and sacrifice to the utmost of his ability.

I am not a pacifist. In fact I despise the breed. I think that there are times and circumstances under which war is necessary, and even preferable to certain types of peace. But nevertheless when the time comes and I am sitting in some water-filled shell hole with my nerves shriveled from fright, I would like to think that, in a kindred spirit of sacrifice, Mr. $20,000-a-year has denied himself that extra box of Havanas.

Why The Czechs Surrendered

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his speech of March 26, Mussolini made some rather flippant remarks about Czecho-Slovakia's failure to resist the recent German invasion. There have been suggestions of a similiar nature in other quarters.

This view, however, ignores completely the situation which was created at Munich and subsequently, a situation which Mussolini himself helped to create. Czech-Slovakia was there required to abandon her natural defenses as well as her artificial fortifications. She was left not only without defenses, but virtually in a position impossible of defense. She was urged to make this sacrifice not only by England and France but by various other governments, including Mussolini himself. She was asked to do this "to save peace, for Europe," as well as for Mussolini and his Fascists. And she was to do this in return for an international guarantee of her new borders. And Mussolini himself, as well as Hitler, was to be one of the guarantors.

We all know now what became of these guarantees. But that was not all. By stealth, cunning and intrigue, directed from outside her borders, internal discord was fostered. The ruling party in Slovakia was encouraged to demand complete independence. That left the Czechs alone to hold the country together and also to defend it against external foes.

Now take a look at the map. The Czechs were almost completely surrounded by German-held territory. Several of their larger cities and industrial centers were so close to the German border, thanks to the Munich accord, that the Germans could bombard these cities without crossing their borders. Prague itself, the capital and largest city, was only about 22 miles from the German border—virtually within range of big guns. In addition there were other difficulties which would have made defense impossible. And, finally, the Czechs were outnumbered 10 to 1. To suggest fighting under such circumstances discloses a lack of sense if not of sincerity. The crime which was consummated this month was prepared last September.

Faith And Ideology

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the fall of Barcelona the civil war in Spain has dragged along desultorily for two months so that Madrid's capitulation comes as an anti-climax to the long drama.

Regardless of which side claimed the sympathies of Americans, the tenacity and spirit displayed by the losers cannot fail to win our admiration. Like Francis I on the field of Pavia, they may well exclaim: "All is lost save honor"

It is certain that the heritage of most Spaniards had not prepared the seedbed for self-government by the people as we conceived it in 1787 and preserved it in 1865. The history of modern Europe bears witness to the fact that the transition from autocratic rule to democratic freedom was a period of gestation during which dictators dominated.

Although his able strategy was demonstrated throughout the conflict, Gen. Franco's foreign collaborators tipped the scales in favor of the inevitable Nationalist victory. At home his largest financial backer was Senor Juan March; his greatest spiritual ally was the Vatican.

Catalonia, long a radical stronghold, did not voice the aspirations of Catholic Spain; the average Spaniard understands religious faith far better than Communistic ideology. The United States should take steps to recognize without delay the only government that exists in Spain today. FIDES.
New York, March 29.

British Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a great deal said these days about democracy. I imagine the United States is about the best example, with such countries as those that were carved out of Russia after the World War and Switzerland a close second. Some Senators, when introducing a bill in Congress three weeks ago, referred to England as a so-called democracy.

Anybody coming from Great Britain, as I do, should know it is only a so-called democracy. The English nation is divided into numerous classes through a crowd of people being allowed to use handles to their names. These classes look down on one another until the lowest, the agricultural laborers and their wives and children, who number millions, are considered to be nobody socially and are treated as kind of untouchables, and so are not free people, and everybody above them would rather suffer from poverty than hire out for even one day to work at common labor and lower themselves socially to the status of common laborers.

Even when in church the rich ones always take the first seats and the laborers the back ones. The so-called nobility and aristocracy in England live in luxury on their estates and never fail to collect rents for miserable slums even from the poorest, though they might have a large income besides. If collecting rents from slums and from people suffering from starvation is not the worst thing a rich man can do I would like to know what it is. The people who might be coming from England to the United States to spend a few hours next summer are part and parcel of that crowd who live largely on slum renting, and while they will be taking a squint at what England lost here one time will try and "put one over" on the Americans, hoping they will excuse the treatment accorded an American woman by the English who have so-called blue blood and who would not like to make an honest living by hiring out to work at common labor. "What Fools . . . !"

DESPITE its almost universal celebration, the origin of All Fools' Day is still wrapped in the mantle of obscurity. Chief stumbling-block for researchers is the fact that some ancient celebrations correspond in character to the custom as we know it. Thus, the Roman Saturnalia, the Hindu Feast of Hull, the pre-Renaissance Feast of Fools are proofs that "nimble-wits" and "numb-wits" had clashed in the long ago in this Tournament of Absurdities.

Many theories have been advanced as to just where, when and how it all started. One gravely went back to Noah and the Ark for an explanation and the London Public Advertiser of March 13, 1769, gave it an unequivocal, if structurally bad editorial blessing:

"The mistake of Noah in sending the dove out of the Ark before the water abated on April 1, and to perpetuate the memory of this deliverance, it was thought proper, whoever forgot so remarkable a circumstance, to punish them by sending them upon some sleeveless errand similar to that ineffectual message upon which the bird was sent by the patriarch."

Rather than give the credit to the patriarch, however, another Englishman argued that the custom commemorated the passion of the Nazarene. As the Jews sent Christ back and forth to mock and torment Him—that is from Annas to Caiaphas, from Caiaphas to Pilate, from Pilate to Herod, and from Herod back again to Pilate—so this ridicule and custom took its rise by which we send on wild-goose chases those whom we think proper objects of ridicule.

One plausible theory has it that the custom is of French origin. This nation led all Christendom in commencing the new year on January 1, instead of March 31. Before the change was made the merrymaking culminated on the octave of the feast—April 1—when visits were made and presents were bestowed. With the adoption of the new calendar, gifts and mock ceremonial visits were made on April 1 with a view to making fools of those so slow-witted as to forget so important a change. The French for an April fool—"un poisson d'Avril"—thus means exactly what it says, an "April fish" or simpleton, since April fishes at this time of the year are young and plentiful and easily hooked.

Though April 1 appears to have been anciently observed in Great Britain as a general festival—as part of those once universal festivities held at the vernal equinox—it was approximately not until the beginning of the eighteenth century that the making of April fools became a common custom. In Scotland, however, we find the custom was practiced a century or two earlier. Known as "hunting the gowk" (gowk, originally a cuckoo, meaning a half-wit or a simpleton), the trick consisted in sending the victim at some stated distance with a letter which contained some couplet such as this:

"This is the first of Aprile,
Hunt the gowk another mile."

Of course the addressee willingly complied and so did the gowk and a good time was had by all except, perhaps, the victim.

In India, at the Feast of Hull, the last day of which is March 31, the chief diversion is the befooling of people by sending them on fruitless and foolish errands. Early Romans were known to have played sly tricks on their neighbors during the festival of Saturnalia, although this took place during the winter sowing, which in modern Fascist Italy lasts in various districts from October to January. It was a lively popular festival and was probably modeled on the earlier Greek Kronia.

English editorial writers who sneered at the recent credulity of Americans in the case of Orson Welles versus his radio public conveniently forget two celebrated April-fooling incidents on record in British newspaper morgues. In 1860, for instance, thousands of His Majesty's none-too-sophisticated subjects were lured by official-looking invitations to the Tower of London to witness "the annual ceremony of washing of white lions." Hours of patient waiting followed. Then someone blurted it was "extraordinary but possibly some prankster's joke." Possibly a Fenian one, at that.

Another rainy All Fools' Day along the Thames saw perspiring London bobbies, cry "'Ere, 'ere. Wot's goin' on 'ere," as a crowd estimated at 800 milled about outside an empty building. Great was the consternation of His Majesty's constabulary to discover that each man, woman and child in that crowd carried at least one meowing black cat. Scotland Yard was flung into action. The result of its investigation is on file among musty London police records. What was it? The poor, credulous souls had come in answer to a newspaper ad promising a good price for every black cat presented.

So—be on your guard, dear Washingtonian, today. But if perhaps, some nimble-wit outwits you; if, absent-mindedly, you reach for the old elusive wallet, dial Columbia 3232 or call Mr. Fish at the aquarium, do not consult a psychiatrist. The old pranks ever find victims. Just be satisfied with the adage that—

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the wisest men."

Fair Enough

Dies' Difficulties

THE ABUSE which has been heaped on Congressman Dies of Texas for investigating the Communists as well as the Nazis and Fascists in this country is defeating its own purpose. It arouses a strong suspicion that the Communists are afraid of even more interesting disclosures and draws public attention to the difficulties of Dies' job and the personal penalty in smear and insult which must be endured by anyone who fights the Stalin Nazi-Bolshevism openly.

Dies is physically and mentally rawboned and was unpopular even before he undertook to investigate un-American activities. His committee had only $25,000 for the first phase of the work, and he, himself, lacking experience and skill, made a clumsy job of it.

But when he is accused of insincerity and an uncommon appetite for personal publicity this charge naturally invites comparisons with Hugo Black and Sherman Minton, New Dealers who also conducted investigations in the course of which their names appeared in print more than a few times. Justice Black's methods were criticized by some of his victims and certain neutral observers, but the present chorus against Dies includes some who not only were able to approve Black's procedure but even excused his membership in an organization of notorious bigots, nightriders and masked terrorists on the ground that if he hadn't joined up he could not have won election to a cheap political job. Minton was given a mission to investigate lobbying on a measure dear to the New Deal. He curried individuals who lobbied against the bill, but avoided inquiry into the lobbying in favor of it because he is a New Dealer himself, and those who lobbied for it were described as White House messengers and included Jimmy Roosevelt.

Minton Escaped Furious Criticism

AND IF IT IS TRUE that Dies erred in admitting irrelevant statements regarding Communist activities, it was true also that Minton, by the President's own authority, had obtained the power to inspect the income tax returns of anti-Administration lobbyists, which had nothing to do with the case. Minton, however, escaped the furious wigging to which Dies has been subjected, even when he proposed as a side issue a press gag measure which might have forbidden publication of the Bible.

The campaign against Dies may be traced to the fact that he traced Communism into branches of the Government and the C. I. O., in which latter organization some of his critics hold membership, and to apprehension that he will reveal more Communists in Federal employ before he gets through. Yet those who try to see and report his work objectively, not concealing or defending his mistakes, are placed in a difficult position, too. They have to bear in mind that Communism is not the only anti-American ism of the day and, in appraising his work, note particularly whether he pays due attention to the rise of religious and racial hatred of the Nazi type. If the tremendous propaganda for this purpose is not analyzed and the sources of its vast revenues are not revealed Dies will be guilty of either an honest, if culpable, failure or an evasion. He has assumed an obligation to make good.

Procedure Code Called Capricious

AS A POSSIBLE unexpected profit from the case, the criticism of Dies might result in the creation of a fair code of procedure for Congressional investigating committees. The present system is loose and capricious, and citizens and organizations under inspection apparently have no rights which such committees are obliged to respect. The Communists have suffered no more than many genuine citizens of the country from a custom which permits Congressmen and Senators to make publicity and politics by harassing witnesses.

These dispatches have been having a misunderstanding with Capt. Michael V. Gannon, Feld Artillery, United States Army, who recently accused them of "adverting against the courage of the Irish." Your correspondent retorted with a word that was short and ugly. Capt. Gannon now writes that he misconstrued the story, which really was innocent of any such wordage or intent. This was noble of him and your correspondent withdraws the retort, hoping that a situation which probably would have left American letters the poorer and added little to the honor and glory of American arms may soon be washed out in Irish whisky.

Dr. Mallory Urges More Support of Cancer Research

Dr. William J. Mallory, president of the District Medical Society, yesterday announced that the Capital's chief cause ontrol needs are a comprehensive program of public education, better trained physicians, wider use of diagnostic and treatment facilities and adequate financial aid for research.

He urged public support of the Women's Field Army, which, beginning today, will conduct an educational and enlistment campaign in 48 states and the District.

"There is about the same amount of money raised annually for the study of cancer as for study of infantile paralysis," he said. "Cancer kills 100 times as many people as infantile paralysis." There should be, he insisted, support for cancer research on "something like a proportional basis."

Hitler's Magician

Herr Schacht's Prestidigitations

NORBERT MUHLEN belongs in that class of biographers whose chief purpose seems to be to discredit their subjects. An uninformed reader of "The Life and Loans of Hjalmar Schacht" (Longmans, Green, $3) is, therefore, apt to be misled rather than enlightened by his biased and hostile narrative of Dr. Schacht's financial career. However, the book may prove to be a stimulating irritant to readers with some knowledge of the political and economic disorders of post-war Germany with which Dr. Schacht had to grapple.

The subtitle of the book is a misnomer, as it is neither a life of Dr. Schacht nor a history of his career as a banker. The events of the years immediately preceding Hitler's advent to power when as head of the Reichsbank he established his reputation as an astute financier are summarized in a few pages. The services which he performed in stabilizing the mark after its post-war inflationary collapse are summarily dismissed as a legend and credit for the accomplishment is assigned to others. While Dr. Schacht is not a man to underrate his own achievements, it is impossible to regard as sheer invention the detailed and documented account of his activities as special currency commissioner set forth in his own book, "The Stabilization of the Mark."

THAT DR. SCHACHT is one of the world's most distinguished opportunists is self-evident. Otherwise he could not have remained at the head of the Reichsbank during the 15 eventful years from 1924 to 1939—years which saw the Dawes plan superseded by the Young Plan and the whole machinery for collection of reparations scrapped. Most of the outstanding world figures with whom he was associated early in his career as president of the Reichsbank have long since vanished from the scene, while Dr. Schacht remains front-page news. Even the recent surrender of his Reichsbank post has not been generally accepted as proof that his public career is at an end.

It would be interesting to know how this master-strategist would justify his conduct in continuing to serve under Hitler after establishing his reputation as a liberal, devoted to the principles of democracy, one of the organizers of the German Democratic Party. That, however, is a matter which he must settle with his own conscience. A prejudiced biographer is certainly not qualified to pass judgment upon him or guess what motives may account for his decision to remain.

There is abundant evidence that Dr. Schacht has always been a courageous critic of financial practices of which he disapproves. It is impossible to believe, as Mr. Muhlen assumes, that throughout his career he has plotted to outwit Germany's creditors. Such an interpretation does violence to the facts of history even if one is disposed to regard Dr. Schacht as a colossal liar.

During the twenties the German people were struggling to fulfill the impossible reparations demands of the former allies. They succeeded for a time because of the vast amounts of foreign capital poured into the country by Americans and other national groups who supplied the wherewithal to keep Germany's industries going, and provide an exportable surplus available for meeting external obligations. When foreign borrowing began to exceed the bounds of reason and encouraged prodigal outlays, Dr. Schacht repeatedly warned of the dangers ahead. When his fears were realized and the financial crisis of 1931 broke over Europe he was entitled to say "I told you so."

Schacht And Foreign Loans

THE DISILLUSIONMENT and bitterness resulting from failure of the policy of fulfillment helped smooth the way for Hitler and inaugurated a new phase of activity for Dr. Schacht as financial and economic dictator of the Third Reich. Mr. Muhlen goes so far as to accuse him of opposing the flotation of long-term foreign loans for German account in order to weaken the republican regime. For lack of such loans, he explains, the Germans resorted to short-term credits which subsequently became blocked under standstill agreements. Therefore, Dr. Schacht is held responsible for the whole series of events that caused short-term overborrowing and eventual freezing of credits.

To make doubly certain that the object of his dislike is presented in particularly black colors as a debt-dodger in the service of the Nazis, Mr. Muhlen maintains that the pre-Hitler standstill agreements have nothing in common with the suspension of debt services under the Third Reich. Yet the role played by Dr. Schacht in emancipating Germany from a considerable part of her foreign indebtedness cannot be properly understood unless one realizes that Germany's financial situation called for desperate measures before Hitler took over control.

Doubtless foreign creditors would be in a better position if the National Socialists had not embarked upon a program of rearmament and industrial expansion. But it should not be forgotten that one of the reasons why the Nazis triumphed—perhaps the chief reason—was the intolerable pressure put upon Germany to meet her external financial obligations.

Got Some Help From The U. S.

IN HIS EFFORTS to scale the German foreign debt, Dr. Schacht has received a good deal of assistance from creditor countries which like the United States and Great Britain devalued their currencies and thus heavily reduced the gold value of debts owing in those currencies. Germany has also been helped by the efforts of her creditors to secure more than their proportionate share of the sums which Germany had available for debt payment. Some of their methods of securing German balances have reacted to their disadvantage—a fact for which Dr. Schacht can hardly be blamed. Foreign holders of German securities have also been induced to sell them at heavy discounts to Germans—a practice often used to advantage by other debtor countries as well as by weak corporations.

Finally, there has been a steady elaboration of the complicated system of blocked accounts which cannot be transferred and can only be utilized for the purchase of goods in Germany. While this device has proved especially effective in forcing German exports upon creditor countries, it is not peculiar to Germany. Blocked balances belonging to Americans have accumulated in more than a score of countries in recent years.

IF GERMANY had followed the example of the United States and other countries and devalued her currency instead of developing an intricate form of trade and financial manipulation with the aid of blocked currencies quoted at widely varying discounts, Dr. Schacht would probably have been dealt with more charitably by his detractors. If he had displayed less finesse in handling Germany's creditors he would be regarded with less suspicion. In short, grievances have been heightened by the ingenuity which he has brought to bear upon the problem of making inadequate resources go a long way.

Outright default has been practiced on a world-wide scale as American investors know to their sorrow. It is not the extent of the losses suffered by Germany's creditors but the way in which they have had to take their losses that arouses resentment.

Mr. Muhlen devotes a good deal of space to Dr. Schacht's career as minister of foreign affairs under Hitler, but gives little information about the precise nature of his activities and accomplishments. The lack of official records as well as the strong prejudice engendered by hatred of the Nazi regime makes it impossible to accept this biographical appraisal of Dr. Schacht's services either as financial or economic dictator as a fair or even accurate presentation. An objective account of his career with a view to acquainting the world with the devices open to a bankrupt state in Germany's position is greatly needed.

$441,000 Added To Home Bequest

Justice O'Donoghue yesterday added $441,000 to the $1,000,000 already provided for the Laura H. and Abraham Lisner home for Aged and Indigent Women.

Mr. Lisner left $1,000,000 to George Washington University and the rest of his estate—nearly $1,000,000—to set up the aged home. His wife left $600,000 to charities and $441,000 to her husband's estate.

Justice O'Donoghue ruled that the wife's will intended the husband's estate to get the money and that it must go with the rest of the property to the aged home rather than to the husband's relatives.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Traveling At Home

HAVING CROSSED the American continent a few months after crossing the European Continent, I find myself wondering about a theory which I learned in college and have always accepted as entirely obvious. It is the theory that since about 1900 there are no longer open spaces on the American frontier into which men can move as pioneers from the older and more crowded settlements; and that, therefore, opportunity, as Americans used to understand it, is no longer free, but has to be arranged and administered by political devices in the European manner.

I was taught that whereas once the American progressive was a pioneer in an undeveloped country, now that the continent is settled and occupied the progressive must be a reformer who redistributes the limited opportunities that have already been developed. My impression is that this theory misrepresents the real situation, that what has disappeared is not the opportunity open to the pioneer settler but the willingness and the capacity that made the pioneers take advantage of the opportunity that was open to them. There is still no end of space open in America. As compared with the really settled regions of Europe, there is still in America an immense amount of undeveloped country for the pioneer settler. It is not the physical frontier that is closed in this generation; but the habits of the people have become fixed and standardized and closed to the effort of pioneering.

American Standard Highest Yet Reached

THE AMERICAN standard of life is, when it is compared with that of the peoples of the Continent, the most expensive way of life ever reached by any people. The luxuries, the comforts, and the mechanical conveniences that are regarded as normal and necessary in America are beyond anything that has been attained anywhere else.

It has been possible to produce them and to maintain them because of the natural resources of the country, because for more than a century there has been a growing population of hard-working and frugal people, because there has been internal peace and freedom which fostered the division of labor, and because there has been available, first out of the savings of Europe and then out of the savings of America, a virtually unlimited amount of capital for investment. America is very rich because the people have worked with the most efficient tools on the resources of the richest continent.

The rising standard of life of the people has, of course, led the people to expect a continually rising standard of life. But the pioneer is a man who renounces the conveniences of the settled community in which he was born, submits himself to a period of hard work and great inconvenience, in order to make for himself in his old age and for his children after him new opportunity in an independent life of his own. Today, however, the conveniences of the existing standards of life are regarded as so indispensable and so much a matter of course, that men who might want to escape from the squalor and drudgery of the slums feel unable to move unless settlements have been prepared for them in advance, with roads, electricity, gas, water, and the movies all ready for the modern pioneer to use.

Industrial Life Called Artificial

THEY ARE NOT only inhibited from finding independence because they expect material conveniences that the older pioneers never dreamed of requiring. They are inhibited also because their life in the great industrial cities is so artificial that they no longer know how to do the things that the pioneer must do. They do not know how to grow their food, or to build their homes, or to take care of animals, or to amuse themselves without the entertainment provided by the entertainment industries.

But, above all, the pioneer spirit is destroyed by the ideal implicit in the educational system. The physical plant of the schools and colleges of America is one of the most impressive things in the country. It is a magnificient monument to the American faith in man's capacity to improve himself. But in this faith there is, it seems to me, a canker which may yet have very serious consequences. There is the assumption that while everyone must have the chance to become highly educated, no one who is highly educated can or should be willing to do ordinary labor.

American education is democratic in the sense that it seeks to provide for all equal opportunity in schools and colleges. But from the point of view of the individual pupil, American education has adopted the aristocratic ideal that an educated man must not work with his hands, must not work at a job which aristocrats have regarded as menial. Thus we are running, it seems to me, into a dangerous contradiction: We are attempting to educate everyone and we are educating everyone who is educated out of the willingness to do the work that uneducated men used to do.

'Peasant' Supply Is Ample No Longer

THE SYSTEM succeeded as long as there was an annual supply of immigrant peasants to do the menial work that their predecessors had risen out of. But now that the country has decided, for very good reasons, to increase its numbers out of the birthrate rather than out of immigration, the question arises, and will become increasingly urgent, whether the schools can continue to educate everyone to the notion that there are only certain occupations open to an educated man.

If they do that, if they fail to convince their students that after receiving an education it is not necessary to do only white-collar work, the great democratic experiment based on the American faith in education will become a very dangerous experiment indeed. For we shall be trying to operate a society without classes among a people educated to an ideal of life that descends from a time when society was sharply divided into classes.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Tender Meat by Violet Rays

Troop movements, annexations, invasions and war threats have probably caused many readers to skip a recent item of much more importance than anything out of Europe. It is the announcement from the Mellon Institute that the days of tough steaks are over.

No longer will the ancient custom of hanging meats for months to make them tender be necessary. Henceforth it will be done by ultraviolet rays in 48 hours. The Mellon Institute announces that the sensational discovery will make it possible to bring tender cuts to the masses for the first time in history.

Presently you will be going to the butcher's and ordering "two pounds of ultraviolet roast beef" or "three pounds of electric-lamp steak."

And in our restaurants will be heard the stern order, "Waiter, take this steak back! It's never had the proper chemical treatment."

The days of tough meat are ended and it marks a great day for the American home and more especially for the diner-outer. It always required careful shopping and a fat purse to get a nice juicy steak. The average American seldom got one that had been "hung" eight months, although he met hundreds of butchers and restaurant owners who should have been "hung" longer.

President Roosevelt divides the American people into two classes: those who have money and those who have not. But the proper classification is those who have enjoyed tender meat and those who have just gone on wearing their teenth down.

Most Americans were raised on chuck and rump steaks, if they ever got any steak at all. And these steaks had all the tender juices, of a ruberoid shingle. How mother labored over one of those things! She would even beat it up to break down its toughness. But if father had been doing his part he would have been down beating up the butcher.

Getting gravy out of one of those old-homestead steaks was like getting cider out of a petrified apple. If there was any juice in a platter of steak and potatoes it came from the potatoes.

We used to complain that there must be people who ate meat using only their front teeth, but we got nowhere. Good meat was just out of reach. But now science has stepped in. Ultimately science conquers all, but it has been stymied for centuries by the American dinner.

Cease sharpening the knife and reinforcing the table legs! Meat will now become ripe almost as swiftly as it is torn off the steer.

But the old corner butcher is a slave to habit. He won't take easily to the idea of juicy steaks for all at low rates. We await the news that he has been caught using sun-tan on a carcass of beef to keep the violet rays out.

The WPA Revulsion

By Mark Sullivan

Unmistakable Signs

THE GREATEST applause given to any speaker on any question in this session of Congress was given this week to a member of the House who attacked WPA—his attack was against foolish and extravagant projects. On another occasion, a motion to investigate WPA was carried by 352 to 27. These and other evidences show that Congress and the country are turning against WPA. This is a sign of something deep-reaching and little understood. It is an instinctive national mood, not understood even by many who feel it.

WPA was an agency for taking care of the needy and deserving appeals to our human sympathy. Many who are on WPA rolls are genuinely deserving. Many others are not. However small or large the number who deserve our sympathy, whatever the defects of WPA, we feel a little ashamed to withhold sympathy from an institution that certainly does take care of some persons who are worthy of the utmost sympathy and consideration.

We observe, or read about, some example of undeserving beneficiaries of WPA, or some waste, or some sordid political use made of WPA—and we are moved to indignation. But there occurs to us some case we personally know of, a fine and worthy person whose job on WPA is his defense against intolerable distress. We think of the case within our own experience, we reflect that there must be many others—and we withhold our indignation.

NEVERTHELESS, the country is turning, as Congress has turned, against WPA. We are turning against it because of an instinct within us even more powerful than sympathy for unfortunate individuals. We are turning against WPA because we sense, vaguely but strongly, that something within WPA constitutes a threat to the very existence of the country. That this is so is sensed in a vague way by many who do not understand why.

To explain just why WPA is a threat to the country is not easy. One way to achieve understanding is to imagine yourself in the position of a person who wishes to bring about the destruction of American society and the substitution of some form of government collectivism — communism, socialism, or a variation of them. Such a person you can imagine reasoning as follows:

"We will take the lowest layer of the population. We will make this layer dependent on the Government for its living. To this layer we will give a standard of living slightly higher than is enjoyed by the layer immediately above, which remains in private employment. The layer above, seeing the better standard of living enjoyed by those who get their living from the Government, will be constantly tempted to feel discontent with their private jobs, constantly tempted to join the number dependent on Government. Thus gradually we will increase the number dependent on Government. In time we will increase the number dependent on Government to where it amounts to some 30 per cent of the total population. At that point the whole American system of society will turn over. For the 70% remaining in private employment will not be able to support the 30% who get their living from Government. We will have destroyed the system of privately owned industry. We will have achieved Government collectivism. We will have done it quietly, without violence. We will have achieved peaceful revolution. We will have done it as if it were a natural process, impossible to resist or even to criticize justly."

SOMETHING MUCH like this is made possible by WPA. The layer of population that is on WPA gets an average pay of $61 a month. That is slightly more than is received by many persons in private employment. Some on WPA draw over $150 a month. This is much more than many in private employment receive.

In addition to larger earnings, other features of work on WPA make it more attractive than many jobs in private industry. Work on WPA is less onerous. Workers on WPA receive, additional to their pay, free gifts of food, which, when bought by ordinary citizens, would cost anywhere from $5 to $15 a month or more. This is done by Secretary Wallace's Triple A under a system of buying up surplus crops in order to help farmers, by keeping up prices of crops. While this helps farmers, it helps even more directly the WPA workers to whom the food is given.

Not only by the things that make WPA more attractive than many jobs in private industry is the system of private industry undermined, the tendency toward Government collectivism furthered. Every policy and practice that makes private industry more difficult to operate tends to throw more and more of the people into the group that is tied into Government as the source of their living. Everything that makes business recovery difficult works toward the same end—destruction of the system of private industry, the coming of Government collectivism.

IF THERE ARE persons who consciously wish to destroy private industry and bring about Government collectivism, WPA must be a fundamental part of their plan. Such persons would, in the words of Representative Wadsworth, make a "desperate endeavor to make WPA permanent." They would, in Representative Woodrum's words, "instead of getting people off WPA, make it attractive for them to stay on."

But dismiss any charge of deliberate intent. Assume, if you wish that the motive of all is honest humanitarianism. The effect is the same. America must liquidate WPA—or WPA will liquidate America.

A Showdown Nears

By Barnet Nover

Chamberlain Crosses The Rubicon

ON FRIDAY Great Britain opened a new chapter in her history. On that day a British prime minister arose in the House of Commons and declared that Great Britain was prepared to go to war to defend the independence of a nation on the other side of Europe.

The British pledge to Poland constitutes an about-face so abrupt and startling as to leave one breathless. Poland's western frontiers are hundreds of miles removed from the English Channel. She is far removed from that British lifeline of empire which begins at Gibraltar and includes such way-stations as Malta, Egypt, Suez, Aden, India, Singapore and Hong-kong. And hitherto Great Britain appeared no more concerned over the possible fate of Poland than she was with the fate of Austria or pre-Munich Czechoslovakia.

WHY, THEN, is Great Britain pledging Poland that support which was refused Austria and Czechoslovakia and has been refused, hitherto, to every other nation east of the Rhine?

The answer is that British statesmen, including Mr. Chamberlain, have at last become convinced that what happens in eastern Europe may have as much of a bearing on the future of Great Britain and the British Empire as what happens in the Mediterranean. With this conviction they have thrown overboard a number of convenient myths which they have been hugging to their bosoms.

They are no longer as certain as some of them were before Munich, that Hitler will or can confine his activities to central and eastern Europe. On the contrary, they are now prepared to accept the contention that Hitler plans to use eastern Europe as a supply base for an attack on the west. And they are also beginning to see that the Berlin-Rome axis, far from being weakened by the expansion of the Third Reich, has been solidified thereby, since only through the axis can Mussolini get what he is after in the Mediterranean.

Main Problem How To Preserve Peace

IN PROMISING to defend Poland, therefore, Great Britain is interposing an obstacle in the way of Hitler's path to the east and thereby may help avert possible aggressions in the west. At the same time Britain's strong stand toward Hitler's pretensions to power in eastern Europe makes it very much easier for France to block Mussolini in the Mediterranean.

The fact is that the problem of Poland, the problem of Tunisia, the problem of Djibouti, the problem of Spain, the problem of Switzerland are all parts of a larger problem. This the Paris and particularly the London government long refused to recognize. That is one important reason why the totalitarian powers have had it all their own way until now.

The larger problem is the problem of preserving peace.

HITHERTO Great Britain and France have sought to solve the problem by a series of concessions to the dictators. That was the policy of so-called appeasement, which actually began long before Chamberlain, although he was the first to make a virtue of what previously had been regarded as an unpleasant necessity.

Step by step the totalitarian powers have been permitted to encroach on the territory of peaceful powers—Japan on China, Italy on Ethiopia, Italy and Germany on Republican Spain, Germany on Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Lithuania.

Great Britain and France did little or nothing to stop them. But with each such victory the appetite of the aggressors grew and so did their capacity to exact further concessions.

The rape of Czecho-Slovakia was the denouement of this tragi-comedy of self-deception and weakness played by the democratic powers. From then on they could no longer blind themselves to the realities of the situation facing them. They found themselves compelled to choose between resistance and surrender, between the preservation of what was left of their power and influence and the acceptance of the rank of third-class nations, shorn of their empires, their freedom of action, even, possibly, of their independence.

Allies Decide On Resistance

THE DECISION both in London and Paris has been in favor of resistance. The Franco-British alliance, already a formidable instrument, has been strengthened. Appropriations for the military, naval and air establishments have been considerably increased in both nations as also the nu r of men to be kept under And on the morrow of t struction of Czecho-Slo a, Great Britain and France i an negotiations with other nations, notably Poland, Rumania, Soviet Russia, Turkey and Yugo via, for the formation of an r ler bloc.

How successful these ations have been it is difficult to say. Very grave obstacles stood in the way. There was Britain's historic reluctance to make any commitments in advance; there was Soviet Russia's understandable suspicion of the London and Paris governments that had so deliberately left Moscow out in the cold during the Munich parley. There was the fear of Poland and Yugoslavia and the other nations in the path of the Nazi steamroller that they would be courting disaster openly to announce their adherence to any such combination.

GREAT BRITAIN has now cut the Gordian knot of all these difficulties. Without waiting for others to join her in guaranteeing Poland's independence and even without asking the Warsaw government for a quid pro quo, Mr. Chamberlain issued a unilateral declaration of Britain's intentions. It is limited in time to the moment when a wider anti-aggression bloc has been formed and it depends for its going into force on Poland's own readiness to fight for her independence. But aside from these conditions the British pledge is comprehensive and unequivocal.

Coming close on the heels of a similar show of strength by M. Daladier with reference to Mussolini's Mediterranean demands, the Chamberlain declaration brings a showdown in Europe near. The totalitarian powers have now been told that they can only get what they want by war. It is doubtful that, presented with this choice, war will be their answer.

Security Board Official Calls Favoritism Charge 'Falsehood'

Ellender

the end, Ellender remarked "the bottom of all this hasn't been reached."

He said he would wire for Col. LeRoy Hodges, comptroller of Virginia, and Henry P. Seidemann, treasurer of the Brookings Institution, both formerly with the SSB, "to see if they can throw any light."

Ellender meant that out of the charges, counter-charges and recriminations exchanged between SSB officials and complaining witnesses certain aspects had not been alleged in substance that the officials were bringing in their own men for jobs to which employes could be raised and that there had been discrimination in classifying and salary raises.

Exchanges Lighten Session

This was all bound up in technicalities and involved records of services and blasted hopes, but a record lightened by exchanges between Corson, Beecher, Odenthal and G. E. Luebben, who was demoted by Beecher from a CAF-11 rating to CAF-10.

Corson, speaking precisely, read into the record:

"At the close of yesterday's hearings (Thursday), Mr. Luebben had just presented a statement indicating the reasons for his dissatisfaction with the treatment he has been accorded while in the employ of the Bureau of Old-Age Insurance. . . .

"Mr. Luebben indicated in response to your questions that he had been in the employ of the bureau for three years, that he had entered the employ of the board at CAF-11, and that after three years was now classified at CAF-10. I do not think it was adequately brought out that Mr. Luebben's compensation when he entered the board was $3,800, and that he is now, despite a necessary demotion in grade, receiving $4,000."

All Favoritism Denied

Corson, increasingly deliberate with words, went on: "There has not been a single instance where a personnel action in the bureau has been made the basis of personal favoritism. There is nothing that has been or can be presented to you to contradict this statement . . ."

Beecher began reading:

"It is my understanding that I have been reported as having made a statement to the effect that 'civil service men are not worth a dawn and professional men would run this organization.' It is my understanding, also, that Mr. Luebben, who presented the matter to this committee, did not state that he had heard any such statement by me, but that he had heard that such a statement was made to some other person. I deny unequivocally having made any such statement to any person at any time."

After a discussion of Luebben's case and other personalities involved, Beecher continued: "In all of these cases, the men appointed have demonstrated qualifications and performance at a level very definitely above that to any performance rendered by Mr. Luebben."

Conflict Over Sheppard

The controversy surrounding Sheppard's case brought conflict of opinions regarding his abilities. Corson said: "I do not think he is worth any more money and I would be remiss in my duty as an officer of the bureau if I did not say so." Walter LeMatt, a former superior of Sheppard, afforded the committee an exactly opposite viewpoint.

Then Ellender whirled on Corson, and Corson denied he was a professional professor. He had once, in part time, taught economics at the University of Richmond and had worked with the NRA as director in Virginia; had been a newspaperman, had worked with the NYA, had gone to the SSB in 1936 at $4,600 and risen to be director of the Bureau of Old-Age Insurance at $9,000.

"How were you picked?" asked Ellender. Corson said he was hired by the board itself and was not acquainted with deliberations over himself and possibly others at the time.

"You mean that out of 120,000,000 people they just reached out and picked you?" He asked if there hadn't been some influence. Corson replied in the negative.

"Nine thousand dollars!" said Ellender.

"N-i-n-e t-h-o-u-s-a-n-d d-o-l-l-a-r-s," parroted Corson, slowly, deliberately, emphatically.

"I take off my hat to you," said Ellender. "Only I haven't a hat on."

"May I say, for the record, that I didn't use the double negative someone quoted me with?" asked Corson. "That is all I object to."

They gathered, when it was all over, the complaining witnesses and the SSB officials, around Ellender's paper-strewn table.

"That's right," said Ellender, "we are a happy family."

He adjourned the hearing to 2 p. m. Monday.

her fair cheek. And in his brief remarks resorted to superlatives in praise of her beauty.

But the couples who strolled about the Basin between and after the various ceremonies seemed no less happy as they sat in absorbed isolation on benches, and ate peanuts rather negligently out of the same bag.

3,000 at Sunrise Ceremony

It all seemed an integral part of the spring ecstacy that got nearly 3,000 persons out of bed early enough yesterday morning to attend the sunrise ceremony at which the Potomac Valley Dancers executed folk dances to tunes of the Marine Band, on a canvas spread in the dew-drenched grass near the foot of Seventeenth street.

And it partook of the elan that led youngsters from the city's playgrounds and settlements early in the afternoon to follow a band concert at the same location with a series of cherry blossom dances in costumes sufficiently light for summer, but colorful as only spring is colorful.

The beauty of the park, and the sky and the air, and the blossoms, was so pervasive that, as each event occurred, the thousands who watched it seemed to have drifted up casually as part of a pilgrimage that had no other goal than communion with Nature herself. Thus following the coronation of Queen Peggy and the impressive military drills and competitions engaged in by the Third Cavalry and the Sixteenth Field Artillery between 4:30 and 5:45 at the polo grounds, the 5,000 spectators at that climax dispersed in a leisurely way in all directions, still drinking in the peaceful beauty around them.

And the same peaceful pace was observed last night as auditors and spectators drifted towards the foot of Seventeenth street to hear the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, and to see the brilliant display of fireworks between 8 and 9—massing together a crowd that, added to the groups who had been there throughout the day, brought the day's attendance to at least 50,000. How many more there were there is no way of knowing.

Japanese in Kimonos

Center of attention were Mrs. Shunnichi Kase, wife of the first secretary of the Japanese Embassy, and Mrs. Shuzo Jimbo, wife of an embassy attache, when they entered with their daughters, all clad in colorful kimonos. Accompanying them were Y. Suma, counselor of the embassy, and M. Ohki, K. Maeda and S. Tsuruga, attaches.

Edgar Morris welcomed representatives of foreign countries and expressed thanks to the numerous Washingtonians who had co-operated in the festival. He especially thanked Commissioners Hazen and McCoach, who, with Col. George Patton, in command of Fort Myer, rode in the triumphal procession, escorted by Troop E, Third Cavalry. Also accompanying Miss Townsend were her personal aide for the afternoon, Lieut. Fletcher Cole, of Troop E, and Senator Barkley. All entered the arena and circled it twice before the coronation.

Playground Children Take Part

Seated on steps leading up to the throne were six colorfully costumed girls from the Palisades playground who had participated in the Cherry Blossom dances. They were Rosemary Taylor, Ruth Miller, Mary Jean Hayes, Doris Witt, Dorothy La Scola and Anne Oakley.

The queen received Miss Joseph Le Franier, of Traverse City, Mich., who at the last harvest was crowned National Cherry Blossom Queen. Miss Le Franier was escorted to a seat of honor in the grandstand by C. Marshall Finnan, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Besides the maids of honor, Lieut. Cole and Lieut. Jules Richardson, the queen's aides, were the only ones who occupied the throne level.

Art and science again combined with nature to make the night display of fireworks altogether memorable. One of the few ground displays was of a cherry tree which glowed brilliantly.

Mrs. Boyle and Mrs. Reddy Take Honors as a Pair

By Marian H. Barre

Mrs. T. Martin Boyle and Mrs. Maurice R. Reddy won the women's pair championship yesterday afternoon in the first event concluded in the Old Dominion Bridge Tournament at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

The winners, both Washington women, play an experienced partnership game but in spite of frequent local successes the Old Dominion is their first major tournament victory. It was a decisive win with a 5-point lead, Mrs. Boyle and Mrs. Reddy scoring 82½ match points by Mrs. W. S. Athey and Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, runners-up.

Mrs. Alma Byrne and Mrs. B. Robins, the present women champions of the District of Columbia, finished the Dominion game in third place. Fourth went to Mrs. Leon Emmerick and Mrs. A. J. Rosenbloom. Mrs. D. E. Stephan and Mrs. Wilfred de St. Aubin ranked fifth. With the exception of Mrs. Emmerick and Mrs. Rosenbloom, all the leaders are Capital women.

The champions in 1938, Mrs. C. Murray Hall and Mrs. P. E. Henninger, played in defense of their title, they finished the game in eighth place.

A contest for mixed pairs was in play last night, the scores will be completed this morning. Open pairs hold the stage in two sessions today. A match for teams of four will conclude the tournament tomorrow evening.

Old Dominion tournaments are yearly events in Alexandria. This sixth annual is sanctioned by the North American Bridge Association, a new organization functioning for the first time in this part of the country. Previous tournaments were held under the auspices of the American Bridge League, which later was merged in the American Contract Bridge League. R. E. Needham is tournament manager, scoring is under the direction of A. P. Stockvis, of this city.

$2,500,000 Fire Wipes Out Block In Sandusky

Sandusky, Ohio, March 31 (INS).—Destroying this city's largest department store and six other leading business places, the worst fire in Sandusky's history today wiped out an entire downtown block, with damage estimated at more than $2,500,000.

Flying embers and falling bricks endangered scores of citizens, but nobody was injured.

National Guardsmen patrolled the ruins tonight to protect passersby when walls still standing seemed in danger of toppling. Cause of the blaze was not determined.

Petition Stays Taxicab Rate Increase Here

6 Companies Protest Boost; Reconsideration Of Tariffs Likely

Taxicab rate increases ordered last week to be effective Monday have been delayed indefinitely because of six taxi companies' petition against the increases.

A meeting of the Public Utilities Commission, scheduled for this morning to consider the petition, was postponed and probably will not be held until late next week.

The petition automatically stayed the commission order, as provided under the public utilities act. The possibility of a new public hearing to reconsider rates was looked upon with favor by one commissioner.

In addition to the petition, the commission yesterday received letters from independent operators requesting reconsideration of rates.

A total of 1,184 taxicabs are represented by the petition. The companies are the Bell City Cab Corporation, Washington, Blue Light, Premier, and Diplomat associations.

In event the commission decides to re-open the hearings, present rates will remain in effect. Testimony given at the public hearings on new rates last month by civic leaders agreed that the drivers should receive added compensation because of the expens of the compulsory liability insurance.

In light of the reduced insurance rates effective tomorrow, one member of the commission is of the belief testimony might be altered somewhat because of the reduction.

At the hearings several drivers said it would be to their advantage if the first zone rate was increased. Failure to increase the first zone rates has resulted in protests from these drivers.

Goldfish Student Tells How to Avoid Scales and Bones

While not exactly disputing the veracity of Harvard and Penn undergraduates who claim they've swallowed goldfish by the dozens, Fred G. Orsinger, director of the Commerce Department aquarium, yesterday suggested a simpler way to be the life of the party.

"Maybe those collegians really did it, though I don't see how they kept from getting at least an upset stomach, since the scales and bony structure of a fish are indigestible in human beings," said Orsinger.

"I'm not insinuating, mind you, but here is how 'goldfish' may be swallowed with impunity. With the party assembled, you swagger up to the bowl and dare one of the guests to gobble one of its tenants.

"He will decline, whereupon you show him up by reaching in, pulling out what appears to be a fish and eating it up. I might explain that first, unbeknownst to anyone, you have concealed a carrot, shaved and carved to resemble a goldfish, in the palm of your hand."

Orsinger said he's worked the trick many times.

Security Board Seeks Pensions For All Disabled

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board yesterday asked Congress to consider an amendment to the social security act which would eventually provide annuities to all permanently and totally disabled persons.

Before the House Ways and Means Committee, Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer emphasized, however, that the board did not recommend specifically that such annuities be provided this year.

Each pensioner would be eligible under the suggested amendment to receive 40 per cent of his average monthly earnings for the first $50 earned and 10 per cent additional on earnings between $50 and $250.

Married pensioners would receive 50 per cent more than single persons.

Altmeyer estimated that for 60,000 disabled persons, the program would cost $27,000,000 a year.

Torrio Helped Run Huge Eastern Rum Ring, Witness Says

New York, March 31 (AP).—Bert Erickson, a convicted rum-runner, testified in Federal Court today that John Torrio, sponsor of "Scarface Al" Capone in the Chicago underworld, was associated with members of a huge rum-running ring operating in the East in 1932.

A surprise Government witness in Torrio's trial on income tax evasion charges, Erickson linked Torrio's name with "19 or 20" others he said were members of an "association" with headquarters in New York whose purpose was "to control the import and prices of liquor."

Torrio is accused with four others of defrauding the Government of $86,000 in income taxes for the years 1933-34-35.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The Shorter You Are, the Trimmer Waistline You Should Have; Frances Langford Keeps Waist to 21 Inches by Exercise

THE SHORTER you are the slimmer your waistline must be, and nobody appreciates this more than the movie and radio stars, who must look as good as they sound.

Frances Fangford, the petite singer, regards this measurement as the barometer of weight. "It is the spot where the pounds are gained first," she declares, "and it takes precious few of them to turn a trim, lithe figure into a dumpy one."

But the waistline is a barometer of weight distribution rather than of total weight. If you possess a small, trim waist, your weight appears less than it actually is, and if your waist is too thick, you look heavier than you really are. Moreover, the activity that keeps the waistline slim is usually enough to keep the other measurements in line.

She Plays Outdoors

Since exercise is always pleasanter to take in the form of outdoor sports, Frances Langford swims, plays tennis, rides horseback and bicycles in her year-around figure program. For those times when she is unable to play outdoors, however, she has a basement gymnasium equipped with an exercise mat and a steel bar for stretching. Calesthenics are not as much fun as outdoor sports, but they certainly have their place in any figure program.

As a result of all her exercise, Miss Langford, who is only 5 feet and 1 inch tall, keeps her waistline down to a willowy 21 inches and she is a charming eyeful. Her measurements do better than conform to the Hollywood standard, which allows the waist to be four and one-fourth times as large as the wrist. Measure your wrist, then your waist, and see if your waistline is nearly as good.

Or, perhaps you would prefer to be in the class with the average woman, and allow 25 inches for the first 5 feet of height, with an additional half-inch by which the height exceeds the first 5 feet.

Stretch or Twist

You can see that in the matter of waistline the less you have the better it is. Unlike the stars of screen and radio, who play at top speed, you may not be able to manage the outdoor activity that will keep you beautifully slim in the middle. Then you will have to take your exercise in capsule form, putting a vigorous workout into 15 to 30 minutes. But don't belittle your calesthenics; some of the loveliest figures are turned out by these daily workouts.

In slimming the waist, the secret is either to stretch or to twist. In twisting you can hold the hips still and turn the trunk from one side to the other, or hold the trunk still and turn the hips. In both methods the waist is used as a pivot.

Checks for Links

Paris (AP).—A navy moire dress is linked to a checked wool coat by the simple device of putting checked motifs on the dress bodice. The motifs have "sloped roofs" and "pillared fronts" in imitation of the Palais Bourbon where the French deputies exchange their oratorical shots. This idea is Heim's.

Marian Anderson Group to Continue School Use Fight

Intensification of its fight for settlement of the issue as to who may use school buildings was voted last night by the Marian Anderson Citizens Committee at a meeting at the Twelfth Street Young Men's Christian Association.

Officers of the committee were directed to appear before the Board of Education April 5 and ask a date for a hearing.

Activities were organized to secure national backing in support of the McGranery resolution in Congress, seeking an investigation of community use of buildings by permission of the Board of Education in the last five years.

Consumers Say Washington Is 'Most Unhealthy'

The Consumers' Council of Washington yesterday indorsed U. S. Public Health Service recommendations for improvement of local health conditions but described the District as "one of the most unhealthy cities in the country."

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the council, said Washington ranked fourth highest in the nation in tuberculosis deaths, that milk consumption was less than half a pint per person per pay, and that infant mortality still was very high.

"The population has increased 28 per cent since 1930, but hospital admissions has increased 44 per cent," she said.

Health Officials Act to Halt Spread of Measles

An outbreak of measles in a mild form was reported yesterday by the District health department.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases, said that 25 cases were reported yesterday, swelling the total for the month to 375.

Health Officer Ruhland called a conference for Monday at 11 a. m. with Gallinger Hospital staff physicians, local measles specialists and other members of the department to consider a program to combate the spread of the disease.

The last epidemic which affected 6,600 children occurred in 1934.

Dr. Cumming cautioned parents to call a physician as soon as the symptoms are noticed. He said the symptoms are a running nose, watery eyes, sore throat and a high temperature.

He advised parents to immunize children and to obtain the convalescent measles serum.

Private School Training Prevents Girl From Meeting Boys; Friends Won't Co-operate; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 17 years old. My problem is how to meet persons of the "stronger sex." I have never gone to school with boys because I was educated in a girls' boarding school until I entered high school. Now a junior, I am attending a day school for girls in the District. I get along fine with girls and am considered popular and fairly good looking. But my girl friends, who know several boys, will not introduce them to me, because—so rumor goes—"it would give them too much competition."

I know a few boys who want to meet me and the feeling is mutual; but my girl friends say, "nothing doing." When I chance to walk by a group of boys and I am with a girl chum, she will talk to them and in spite of requests, she makes no introduction. Do you think I should speak to those boys the next time I see them? They always speak to me and ask me if they can walk home with me, but being dubious, I always answer, "no."

I know that I could have a good time with boys, because everyone that I have met comes to see me or calls within a short time. I can dance and love all sports, including tennis, swimming, skating, etc. I do not believe in going steady and have twice refused to do so. One boy, who lives down the street from me and whom I see every day, has stopped several times and offered to take me home. I haven't accepted so far, but do you think it would be all right to do so? I know him and I am sure he knows who I am.

Also, coming home from the movies one evening, it was raining hard. My girl friend and I had on our best outfits and a boy, whom I have often seen, asked if we wanted a ride home. We refused, and as a result both of us still have traces of a cold. Did we do right in refusing? Please tell me how to make some social contacts with boys in the near future. ANXIOUS.

Advice of Contemporary

DEAR ANXIOUS: I note by the postmark on your letter that you live in a historied Virginia suburb of Washington. Apparently you belong to a family of some means and social pretensions—since you have been carefully educated in girls' private schools. One assumes, therefore, that you live in a good neighborhood, so-called, that your family is probably well and favorably known in the community; and that neighboring families may be reckoned, in the main, as persons of equal substance and respectability, whose offspring have been drilled—even as you—in the fundamentals of decent behavior.

Supposing all this is true, you don't have to be so stand-offish as to await a formal introduction before passing the time of day with a personable youth of the neighborhood. If one shows you civility, be appreciative. If one speaks to you, make answer in kind. If boys attach themselves to a group of your girl friends when you are along, and nobody bothers about introductions, contribute your share to the conversation as a matter of course. No need to act as though the cat had your tongue. The very boys you are trying to impress with your exaggerated correctness will think rather less of you if you do.

Oddly enough, this very subject came up for discussion last evening, in a small company, which included several spokesmen for the high school age group. In defining various types of socially inept girls, a high spirited, black-eyed belle of 17 touched on the "boarding school type," (as she called it), "which (she went on to say) never knows what to say to boys," (and her voice took on a mocking primness as she made the statement). She said it had been her observation that most girls who had been exclusively educated in private schools just don't seem to know how to act in the world outside. Both she and her brother, by the way, have alternated between private and public schools, and infinitely prefer the latter as "socializing institutions."

She who would have friends, this girl argued in essence, must show herself friendly. "If you want a certain boy for a beau, there's just one way to get him. Go after him and nail him," she said. Asked how she "nails them," she said she does it in various ways, suiting her technique to the temperament of the boy. One of her favorite devices is casual entertaining on Sunday afternoons or evenings. She asks three or four girls to come and bring their beaux, and makes this the occasion for inviting some boy she wants to know better. She shows a lively interest in all that is going on in her little world—school dances, "Y" dances, football and basketball games, bicycling, etc.

"Get excited about the things That Certain Boy is interested in," she said. "The giving of invitations is the girl's business, after all," she remarked. "It's up to her to think of things to do and places to go, and make them sound wonderful. Why, I spent one whole season just walking around the Tidal Basin with a boy who hadn't any money, but who was plenty good fun. I met another boy who seemed to like me, but he didn't follow through. So I called him one day and asked him over to supper, naming some others who were coming. Well, he came and the others didn't show up; there was a general mix-up. But it turned out all right. He's been calling ever since."

It is axiomatic that, when living in Rome, one should do as the (well bred) Romans do. Since you are living in an age when a certain informality characterizes the social interchange of kindred spirits, it appears that you have need to be less punctiliously aloof in your attitude toward boys. Stop acting like a stuffed shirtwaist and behave more like a normally sociable human being. Adopt the attitude that friends of your friends are welcomed as YOUR friends. In future, if you meet in the neighborhood a boy whose identity is known to you and whose manner is courteous, and he falls in step or asks to see you home, let him come along and have him meet the family. By that simple gesture, you divest the episode of any possible suggestion of impropriety. However, I do advise you to draw the line against accepting a "lift," after the theater—even in a downpour—from any boy, save a very old friend. M. H.

Learn Clever Party Toasts

A TOAST to Diane! Friends gayly raise their glasses at the farewell dinner preceding her trip:

"Here's to you while you're here Here's to you when you're there. If you—over there—will drink to us here."

Up on the etiquette of toasts, Diane keeps her seat until the others have drunk to her, then rises and replies wittily:

"Here's to you—here, there, everywhere."

You're always a hit at parties if you know how to make and answer toasts cleverly.

The talk lags? That's the time to trot out a lively joke. Try this one:

Johnny—What does a volcano do with its lava?

Hood Effect for Romance

For adding a touch of femininity and sentiment to a dinner or evening dress there's nothing like a hood. This style, coming increasingly into vogue, suggests tete-a-tetes on moonlit balconies or rambles under the stars, or dances on wind-swept roof gardens. The chiffon evening dress shown above has an attached hood of the same material, although many dresses have detachable scarf hoods which may be in contrasting colors. Note in the gown pictured the close-fitting bodice and the graceful fullness of the skirt. This costume would be effective in cyclamen, blue, gray or yellow chiffon. Appropriate for many summer occasions.

Grandma's Birthday

Mr. Gink—Well, well Grandma, how does it feel to be a young lady of 77?

Grandma—76!

Mr. Gink — That's right. Of course, though, you're really going on 77 now—well if here isn't your little boy, Archie!

Uncle Archie—Hello, Mother! Congratulations. I've brought you six and a half dozen roses—one for each year——

Grandma — Wait a minute! That's 78!

Uncle Archie—Well, that's near enough. Anyway it won't be long now——

Grandma—It'll be two whole years. Well, thank you for the roses, Archie.

Grandma—Certainly not!

Junior—I told Bobby Bivens you did, and he said you didn't and I said you did——

Grandma—You go back and tell him I didn't—RIGHT AWAY!

Marjorie — Hello, Grandma! Here's a little bed jacket for you. You know Mr. Kidder, don't you?

Mr. Kidder—Of course Grandma knows me. She's my best girl.

Mr. Gink—Now, now, wait a minute! I've got a real beau for Grandma.

Marjorie—No! Who?

Mr. Gink—Old Mr. Van Zany—over at the soldiers' home. Did you see the piece in the paper about him? He was 100 years old last week.

Mr. Kidder—Here now, I won't stand for that!

Grandma—That's too old.

Mr. Gink—Well, what's a little difference of 20 years?

Grandma—Twenty-four years!

Marjorie—Let's see—that makes you 76, doesn't it Grandma? Just imagine being 76 years old!

Mrs. Gink—Guess who's come to see you, Grandma. Mrs. Gabber!

Grandma—Now who told HER about this? She's the last person in the world—Oh, how do you do, Sally? Come in.

Mrs. Gabber — Congratulations, Martha. Well, it doesn't seem possible that you're 79 years old.

Grandma—76!

Mrs. Gabber—Is that all? Well, I was telling Susie this morning that you must be about 79 because I knew you were at least three years older than I was. I remember you were ahead of me in school and a great big girl—

Grandma—I'm sorry, Sally, but I'm only 76.

Mrs. Gabber—Say, guess who I saw the other day? Clem Harrison. We were talking about ages and I told him you were 79 and he said he was sure you were up in 80 somewhere.

Grandma—Clem Harrison? Why I scarcely knew him!

Mrs. Gabber—Well, he said he was an old beau of yours! Oh, yes, and here's some chicken broth Susie sent you.

Grandma—Thank you, Sally. And thank Susie, and say—tell Clem Harrison the next time you see him that I'm SEVENTY-SIX!

Grandma—Just fine.

Grandma—Do what?

Cousin Ella—Look so well. And get around the way you do. I think you're the most remarkable woman I ever saw!

Grandma—What do you mean?

Cousin Ella—Well, to be so active—and alert—at your age. Why, Bert was just saying the other day what a perfectly wonderful mind you had.

Grandma—You mean that I'm not feeble-minded?

Cousin Ella—Not that exactly, but—well, that you keep up on things and are so—so bright. Why Bert said he could just talk to you about current events and things the same as he could anybody. And when you consider that you're practically an octogenarian——

Grandma—Please, Ella—SEVENTY-SIX.

Sister—Grandma, how many candles shall I put on the cake?

Grandma—76!

Mr. Gink—Make it 77. She's got to have one to grow on.

Grandma—Never mind that——

Uncle Archie—Make it 80, for good measure.

Mr. Kidder—80? Why that's a mere flapper! Say, Grandma, what about a date for a little ice skating?

Cousin Bert — Seventy-seven years young.

Sister—Say, I just put the whole seven dozen candles on the cake. It was no use to throw 'em away—wait, where are you going, Grandma?

Many Society Notables Attend Affair Given by Minister's Wife for Visiting Historian Here on Lecture Tour

ONCE JAILED FOR SIX MONTHS in Ireland on a charge of "quoting Shakespeare against the government," Miss Dorothy Macardle, guest of honor at Mrs. Robert Brennan's tea yesterday afternoon, gave one the impression that it was all a lark to her.

The guest list included social notables, newspaperwomen, official and diplomatic women. Miss Macardle, Irish playwright, historian, lecturer and former political prisoner, was the center of attention from the instant the first guest arrived and the company was increased by the Friday afternoon crop of visitors, some of whom, like Mme. Dimitriu, came to call and remained to pour.

One gathers that during the time of Miss Macardle's incarceration her chief occupation was amusing herself by embarrassing her jailers, whether by hunger striking for a week, demanding to be classed as a military prisoner or any method that came to hand. Why they let her out again was not divulged, but possibly she just "wore 'em down" until it was a pleasure for them to release her.

Mediumly tall, slenderly built, with the quick gestures of a Frenchwoman, a windblown bob that gave her an elfin appearance, and a rapier-like Irish wit, she held the guests in spellbound clusters around her until long past the end of the tea hour.

From a career which began with a volume on the construction of verse, branched out into the seditious publication against the Nationalist government, which she published alone from a garret and for which she was jailed after ten issues, she has gone far along the path of the pen.

Has Written Five Plays

Her book, "The Irish Republic," which was published in 1937, contains a preface by Prime Minister Eamon de Valera. She is a graduate of the National University of Ireland and was for some years Pfeiffer Lecturer in English Literature at Alexandre College, Dublin. Miss Macardle has written five plays which were produced by the Abbey Theater.

To chronicle a few other of her interests—she has organized educational conferences in connection with the Shakespearean festivals at Stratford-on-Avon; broadcasts lectures on contemporary drama; has been for years dramatic critic to the Irish Press in Dublin, for which paper she was also correspondent in Geneva, Switzerland, and has contributed to the Theater Arts Monthly in New York.

At the moment she is in the United States on a lecture tour on Anglo-Irish literature, on the theory that America is more interested in hearing about the literature and folklore of Ireland than about its political uprisings. It is to tell of that folklore that she has been sent here by the Irish government.

Three Daughters Assist Hostess

At a dining table covered by cobwebby Irish lace, which had been made by Mrs. Brennan, guests were treated to a veritable feast. Assisting Mrs. Brennan in the dining room were her three daughters, the Misses Emer, Maeve and Deidre Brennan, in black crepe. Mrs. Brennan wore a black sheer with an intricately wrought silver cross set with amethysts as her only ornament.

Miss Macardle, who, by the way, will be guest speaker at the Women's National Press Club April 18, wore a tea gown with a bodice of white lace, a black skirt and a brooch of unusual irridescent glass bubbles.

At the tea table during the afternoon were Mme. Dimitriu, wife of the Assistant Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation; Miss Norah Ganey and Miss Agnes Mullady.

Noted among the guests were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg and Mrs. Garth Healy, wife of the Secretary of the Irish Legation.

Scattering of Notables Witness Festival

While the Irish were making gay on Kalorama road, many of Washington's shivering social notables took their places on the benches at the Polo Grounds in Potomac Park yesterday to see Miss Peggy Townsend, Washington's glamour girl, crowned queen of the cherry blossom festival.

Mrs. Effingham Townsend, her mother, draped a blanket over her knees as the chill wind swept up from the river. Mrs. Townsend looked as smart as her daughter in a black coat with a fur collar, a black straw hat trimmed with white gardenias, and white gloves. Her daughter wore a full-skirted frock of gray marquisette trimmed with bands of cyclamen, and a brief chubby wrap to keep the breezes away.

In front-rom seats were Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen, whose husband, District Commissioner, also was driven about the grounds in a limousine. Next to her was Mrs. Daniel McCoach, wife of another Commissioner, Col. McCoach, who wore a black coat with a silver fox collar and a little pill box hat trimmed with ruffles of cyclamen chiffon.

Mme. Rajamaitri, wife of the Siamese Minister, was gowned in a smart black fur coat and tiny black hat, tricorne shaped. Others present from the diplomatic corps included Count Gabriel De Gramont of the French embassy.

Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, jr., the former Ann Meem, came with her mother, Mrs. Harry Grant Meem. Sunburned and healthy after a long stay in Palm Beach, Mrs. McLean wore a leopard skin coat over her blue crepe frock.

Mme. Agacio Visiting Here

The State Department is so busy with plans for the visit of the King and Queen, who will be here earlier than the Norwegian couple, that the schedule for the latters Washington stay will not be arranged for some time.

Charles Gordon Davison Weds Miss Helen Katherine Derrom

—Pach Bros.

MRS. DAVISON

Sister of Bride Is Attendant In Evening Ceremony

Of wide interest in Washington was the wedding yesterday in Paterson, N. J., of Miss Helen Katherine Derrom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Theodore Derrom, of Glen Rock, N. J., and Charles Gordon Davison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alan Davison, of Washington. The ceremony took place last evening at 8:30 o'clock in the East Side Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Howard A. Adair officiated, assisted by Dr. Zimmerman.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white chantilly lace over white satin. Her long tulle veil fell from a coronet of lace, and her bridal bouquet was a cascade of white lilac and white iris.

Mrs. Donald Garner Matron of Honor

Mrs. Donald Garner, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor and wore a net gown, fashioned like that of the bride. It was of periwinkle blue over yellow taffeta. She carried a cascade of purple lilacs and yellow African daisies.

Bridesmaids were Miss Alice Cheyne, Miss Janet Cheyne and Miss Ann Van Riper, of Paterson, N. J., and Mrs. John Vander Voort, of Ridgewood, N. J. They were gowned in yellow net over yellow taffeta, their frocks fashioned similar to that of the matron of honor, and all of them carried cascades of purple lilacs and yellow Africa daisies.

Robert A. Davison Is Best Man

Robert Alan Davison was best man for his brother and the ushers included Ralph Carpenter, Ulysses Steele, Charles King and Donald Garner. Following the reception there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother was gowned in cinnamon rose chiffon with a corsage of white orchids.

District Delta Gammas Feting Parley Delegates

National President Included in Group Of 50 Here Attending East Coast Session; Many Problems Discussed at Conference

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Washington Delta Gammas are hostesses this week-end, for the first time, to a province convention of the sorority, with 50 delegates attending from chapters on the East Coast of this country and Canada, and the national president, Miss Marguerite Winant, of New York, a guest. Miss Margaret Dodds, of Montreal, is presiding at the sessions, being held at Wardman Park Hotel, headquarters for the conference.

Mrs. Holt Marchant is general chairman of local arrangements.

Following registration yesterday afternoon, there were separate discussions by the active chapter and alumnae groups, the former considering such problems as plans for the rushing season, the procuring of recommendations for pledges and other campus questions. The alumnae devoted attention to means of co-operating in the national project of the sorority—assistance to the blind. The local alumnae chapter has given funds through social agencies for the transportation of blind persons to clinics or other places to which they need conveyance. Aid has been extended in other ways by chapters elsewhere to the blind of their communities.

Speakers on the active chapter program were Miss Erica Sigerist, of Goucher College; Miss Mildred Wells, of Cornell University; Miss Marion Eberly, of Penn State College, and Miss Grace Flintoft, of McGill University in Canada.

The alumnae speakers were Mrs. John Hill, of New York City; Mrs. Nicholas Albertson, of Rochester; Miss Janet Browne, of Washington, former province secretary, and Mrs. R. Lundy Grout, of Montreal.

Publicity Subject For Discussion

Publicity was the subject of a joint conference session last night with Mrs. Gerald P. Flood, of Washington; Miss Jean Hammer, of Philadelphia; Miss Eleanor Stever, of Adelphi College; Miss Dorothy Miller, of Buffalo, and Mrs. William Ford, of New York City, participating.

Last night, the first social affair of the conference was a reception for 100 guests. Miss Winant, Miss Dodds, Miss Ida Mae Orr, president of the local alumnae chapter, and Miss Ruth Dewey, of the active chapter at American University, were in the receiving line. Music for the occasion was provided by a trio of Delta Gammas who were graduated from American last year—the Misses Drucilla Gottshall, Lucille Maris and Kathryn Ingberg.

This morning those participating in the active chapter conference will be the Misses Marcella Shea, of Syracuse University; Ruth Dewey, of American; Peggy McLaren, of Toronto, and Miss Stever. On the alumnae program are Mrs. A. W. Van Ness, of Syracuse; Miss Orr, of Washington; Miss Louise Ward, of Baltimore; Miss Wilma Nicholson, of Toronto, and Mrs. Reynold Kraft, of Long Island. Speakers at a joint session this afternoon will be Miss Ruth Ellenwood, alumnae chairman for New York State; Miss Sigerist and Miss Pauline Schmid, of New Jersey.

This afternoon the delegates will be received at the White House at tea at 4 o'clock and tonight there will be the founders' day banquet for 150 guests at the Wardman Park. The music this evening will be a group of songs by Miss Maxwell Galloway, accompanied by Miss Mary Lehman. Mrs. H. H. Jacobs will be toastmistress.

Tomorrow morning the ambitious visitors, escorted by members of the Alumnae Chapter, will start out at 7 o'clock to see the cherry blossoms and will be entertained at breakfast by the active chapter on American University campus and will continue their sight-seeing for the rest of the morning, winding up at L'Escargo for luncheon.

Other Alumnae Delegates Attend

Alumnae delegates other than those on the conference program are Miss Dorothy Miller, of Buffalo; Miss Olive Loeffler, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Ira A. Updike, State alumnae chairman of Virginia.

Guests from active chapters include the Misses Viola Alcock and Audrey Brown, of Adelphi College; Betty Jean Hickey, of Syracuse University; Helen Stevens and Gladys Ecclestone, of the University of Toronto; Helen Hechler and Anne B. Sturman, of Penn State College.

Those from the alumnae chapters are the Misses Betty and Nora Miner and Mrs. G. C. Clarke, of Montreal; Mrs. Anthony Hill, Mrs. Willis Henning, Mrs. Frank Hormah, Miss Ruth Bender, Miss Marjorie Lake, Virginia Lendemaun and Mrs. Mary Franklin, of New York City; Mrs. Robert Bent, Mrs. Edwin Van Rees, Miss Esther Aiteych and Miss Helen Schwab, of Long Island; Miss Josephine Brown, of New Jersey; Miss Mildred D. 'Democracies Getting Flabby,' D. A. R. Told

Lieut. Hedrcik Asks 'Return to God's Plan' For Guidance

A plea for "return to God's plan" to preserve the inherent qualities of liberty and justice which are expressed in democracy was made yesterday by Lieut. Col. L. H. Hedrick, of the Judge Advocate General's office, U. S. A., in an address before the national defense committee of the District D. A. R.

"Democracy is not merely a form of government," Col. Hedrick said. "It is bound up in the deep-rooted characteristics of mankind. We have become fundamentally flabby. It is high time we turn to Him who, down through the years, has guided us through even darker hours. These may seem surprising words coming from an Army officer, but if you will look back through history you will find the men and women who were outstanding were not ashamed to acknowledge their devotion to God's plan.

"America cannot afford to take democracy for granted. It is time for democracy to take stock of itself and for a revival in our thoughts and hearts of all that democracy means to use."

Col. Hedrick urged the women to direct their work to inspiring a renewed appreciation of American ideals and institutions as the best safeguard against the influence of ideologies of dictators, whatever brand they might be.

Mrs. Frank H. Towner, chairman of national defense through patriotic education in the District D. A. R., introduced the speaker and presided at the business meeting which preceded the program.

The meeting was held in the Mayflower Hotel. After it a luncheon was given by Mrs. Harry V Rigdon for some of the committee members and representatives of several other patriotic groups.

Bishop Clair Honored at Dinner Here

Prelate's Service Of Half a Century In Methodist Church Marked at Banquet

Commemorating a half century in the Methodist ministry, Bishop Matthew W. Clair, retired, last night was tendered a testimonial dinner by the Asbury M. E. congregation, which he served for 17 years. Bishop A. P. Shaw also was an honor guest.

Staged in the fellowship hall at Eleventh and K streets northwest, the dinner was in connection with the Washington annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church now in session at Asbury and Mount Vernon Place M. E. churches South.

The bishop who led the Covington area of the M. E. Church for many years, was characterized by Herbert A. Green as "an inspiration to young ministers." Dr. J. D. Brown, of the South Baltimore District, also lauded Bishop Clair.

Later Bishop Clair, under whose leadership the present structure was constructed in 1916, was presented with purses on behalf of Asbury by Mrs. Genevieve T. Staley, and by the conference.

More than 400 men and women attended the dinner, including pastors and their wives, delegates and friends. F. F. King was toastmaster.

Other features of yesterday's conference sessions were a united session at Mount Vernon in the morning, and missionary programs in the afternoon and early evening.

Bishop Clair, who served here from 1902 to 1919, began his pastorate at Harpers Ferry, W. Va., in 1889.

Police Probe 2 Burglaries at Headquarters

Robber Entered by Transom, Ransacked Desk, Stole File

Investigation of recent burglaries in two squad rooms at Police Headquarters is under way, The Post learned last night.

The burglaries, which occurred several weeks ago, took place in the office of Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon and Lieut. John H. Fowler's ballistics bureau. They have never been revealed by police officials.

It was learned that Lieut. Shimon's squad room was entered through a transom and an important file of police characters stolen. His keys were taken and the desk drawers ransacked, the lieutenant stated. He said he had no idea who could have entered the room, located only 40 feet from the office of Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, where a man is on duty all night.

Lieut. Fowler's office, on the fourth floor of the headquarters building, was looted about the same time. Nothing of value was taken from his place and it was said that the intruder apparently was looking for information regarding the activities of the two ace investigators.

It is believed that the jobs were committed by a policeman who has heard rumors of secret investigations, apparently in an effort to obtain the jump on the investigators and cover up his own tracks, observers said.

Officials stated that neither Shimon nor Fowler have been investigating rumors of alleged graft.

Nice Holds Women's Hats More Dangerous Than Guns

Former Maryland Governor Pokes Fun at Milady's Chapeau in Addressing Spring Banquet of Kappa Sigma Fraternity Here

Armies might find modern women's hats more effective in repelling an enemy than machine guns, former Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, told 150 guests at the spring banquet of Kappa Sigma fraternity last night at Columbia Country Club, Chevy Chase, Md.

Such hats, he suggested are "calculated to strike terror into the hearts of the most intrepid and courageous soldier. I should hate to be in an army and suddenly be confronted by a regiment of women arrayed in modern hats. I should be unable to distinguish between the hats and machine guns."

He reiterates, however, his "abiding affection for woman" though it "does not extend to the present form of her hats."

Judge Paul D. Gold, of the Veterans' Administration Board of Appeals, on the other hand, held that since Eve chose her own form of headdress, women today should have a right to do likewise. Men, he said, "should take it and like it."

Among guests of honor were James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons; Thomas Lodge, chairman of the A. B. C. Board; Emil Hurja, former assistant to the chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Representative Jere Cooper, of Tennessee; Representative James Griffith, of Louisiana; E. Barrett Prettyman, former District corporation counsel; James Pixley, of George Washington University, and Roy St. Lewis, president of Kappa Sigma. R. M. Evans, assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, was toastmaster.

War Would Lift Russian Prestige, Dr. Walsh Says

Soviet Russia "would take a new lease on life" if war breaks out in Europe, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice-president of Georgetown University, declared last night in a lecture at Memorial Continental Hall.

He expressed "devout hope" no opportunity would be given Russia "to join a coalition, the prestige of which would . . . strengthen the waning fortunes of the Soviet Government."

"If Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini will practice self-restraint . . . they will defer any further claims or provocations," Dr. Walsh said, "and thus give Western Europe a breathing space for peaceful development. . . ."

In Gen. Franco's victory, he saw "what may prove to be the final death blow of communism in the international field."

Roosevelt Aide Will Build Home Near Monticello

Charlottesville, Va., March 31.—Work will be started in this county next month on a home for Gen. Edward M. Watson, aide to President Roosevelt, who is taking James Roosevelt's place as secretary at the White House. The residence is to be built on the old Porter place, about one mile beyond "Monticello," the Jefferson shrine.

Known as "Kenwood," the land is a part of the Carter grant of 1730. The tract was purchased by Jefferson and once formed a part of "Monticello," being sold with other property to satisfy his creditors.

The house now on the property will be razed and a 22-room brick house will be constructed, according to plans revealed by R. E. Lee & Sons, general contractors. It is expected that the residence will be completed next winter.

Gen. Watson plans to make his home here permanently when he retires. He was recently promoted from colonel to general.

Let European Fight Alone, Lundeen Says

Tells Legion Post 'Real Estate' War Is 'None of Our Affair'

America was warned to "let Europeans do the fighting over European real estate" in a speech last night by Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

Addressing Victory Post, No. 4, American Legion, Lundeen asserted. "It's none of our affair whether or not Germany and Italy might beat England and France, if war broke out in Europe and we stayed clear of it."

Once America "steps into that seething cauldron over there," he said, "we can never get out of it. We would win the war eventually, of course, but our boys would come back to a worse depression than the last war caused. And as things went from bad to worse, before long a man on horseback might show up here and say, 'The debating society is dissolved. I'm running this show.'"

Democracy Questioned

Lundeen, a member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, remarked that "since England and France are saying tonight their frontier is in Poland, I imagine some Americans will come out tomorrow and put our frontier on the Vistula."

"Why talk about France and Britain as democracies," he demanded, when it was Chamberlain himself who told Hitler to go ahead and take Austria and the Sudetens, when England and France own great colonial empires of subject people, when France today is under one-man rule, with Daladier ruling by edict?"

Post Team Rewarded

America is in no danger of attack from any combination of European powers, he said, "and I believe in a big enough defense program to keep us invulnerable. That is the way to protect our own democracy—not by trying to act as judge, jury and policeman for the whole world."

Preceding Lundeen's speech in the Bamboo Gardens, trophies were awarded to members of the Victory Post ball team, District champions for 1938.

'Bigger and Better' Ringling Circus Here on Way to N. Y.

42 Carloads of Performers, Officials, Attendants, Animals and Equipment Will Open Here on May 15

The biggest circus train ever to come out of Florida, the Ringling Bros-Barnum & Bailey show paused here for a few hours yesterday en route to New York.

Forty-two carloads of performers, officials, attendants, animals and equipment, the picturesque train caravan attracted scores of devotees to its temporary camp ground in Potomac Yards, Alexandria, including Melvin D. Hildreth, president of the Circus Fans Association. Director William M. Mann, of the Washington Zoo, and Director Fred Orsinger, of the Commerce Department aquarium.

"Biggest circus train ever to hit the road," George Smith, general manager, said proudly. "Of course, it'll be better than ever, too."

Capt. Terrell Jacobs and his wife, Dolly, will work more than 50 lions, tigers and leopards this season, more than ever before. The show opens in Madison Square Garden next Wednesday and will come to Washington May 15, playing at the new show grounds on Benning road.

Occupying a private flat car, which is required for his air-conditioned wagon, was Gargantua the Great, the huge gorilla.

Smith fears no repetition of the labor troubles which forced the circus to close last year.

Unlucky Man Wed In Hospital Rather Than Dare Delay

Harry Martin, 3727 Brandywine street northwest, had all the bad luck he wanted. He decided nothing could make him tempt fate by delaying his wedding to Miss Frances Warfield, 3363 Eighteenth street northwest.

They were married last night at Emergency Hospital, where Martin has been a patient since March 9, when he was burned by a stove in a gas station at 3535 Connecticut avenue, where he was employed.

Martin took his vows in a wheel chair while his bride stood beside him. The marriage service was read by the Rev. Walter M. Michael, pastor of the Elbrooke M. E. Church.

Martin will remain in the hospital at least two weeks more.

Modern Stresses May Expand Brain, Says Hrdlicka

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, keeper of the world's largest collection of human skulls, yesterday expressed the opinion that the stresses and perplexities of modern life may accelerate evolution of brain and body.

The scientist's comment was in the nature of a birthday statement. He was 70 last Wednesday. On Tuesday and Wednesday of next week the famous anthropologist of the Smithsonian Institution will be honored by the Association of Physical Anthropologists in Philadelphia.

The great apes, according to Dr. Hrdlicka, are more or less senile races. Little changes are expected in their species because they have become too well adapted to their environments.

Skull and brain dimensions in man appear to be increasing constantly, however, he said. This is notable, he added, at almost any large gathering of scientists, bankers, doctors or lawyers.

"Man's brain is so constructed that the possibilities of its further normal increase are almost infinite, and the day may not be far away when the geniuses of today will be matched by many, if not by the average, of the future population."

Academy Receives Dewey's Sword

Rear Admiral Wilson Brawn, superintendent of the Naval Academy, announced yesterday that the service sword of Admiral George Dewey, hero of the Battle of Manila, has been presented to the Naval Academy museum by the admiral's son, Mr. George S. Dewey, of Chicago.

The sword was received from the Chicago Historical Society where it had been on loan and will remain at the Naval Academy.

Cut $750,000, D. C. Budget Up Thursday

Burden of Slash to Fall on Costs of Operation; Building Projects Saved

With between $750,000 and $1,000,000 slashed from the Budget Bureau's estimate, the 1940 appropriations bill for the District of Columbia will be reported to the House next Thursday, it was learned yesterday.

The cuts were agreed upon by the District subcommittee on appropriations headed by Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, which completed marking up the measure at a private meeting.

Capital improvements, such as the new library building and other Municipal Center developments, will not be affected by the economy moves, it was believed.

Reports were that "operating expenses" will bear the brunt of the slash, possibly in accord with economies suggested in the Griffenhagen reorganization measure now before a District subcommittee.

There was the possibility, too, that salaries of Elwood Street, director of public welfare, and Miss Alice Hill, director of the public assistance division, might have been omitted, in line with proposals in the Burdette Lewis report on District relief. Since Lewis recommended a total relief increase, however, it was not believed the "saving" here would be material.

The most substantial cut considered as a possibility could have been made in holding down the amount the District would repay to the United States Treasury under the Capper-Cramton park improvement program and on original PWA loans.

These payments have been totaling $1,300,000 yearly, of which $1,000,000 has been on PWA repayments. The Commissioners recommended to the Budget Bureau that since only around $500,000 is due on the original PWA loan, the repayment to the Treasury be cut to around $750,000 this year. This the bureau disallowed, contending that amounts due on the park program should be put in to keep the payment stable.

Skeleton of Baby Found in Attic

A baby's skeleton, wrapped in a 12-year-old newspaper, was discovered in the rafters of a house in the 1700 block of Q street northwest yesterday by an electrician, Herbert Prince, of 907 Jackson street northeast.

Wrapped around the cloth bag containing the bones was a newspaper dated July 16, 1927.

Mrs. Cummings' Reported Better

Mrs. Homer Cummings is suffering from a condition caused "by high blood pressure with intestinal complications," a statement issued by her physician, Dr. Paul F. Dickens, last night said.

"While Mrs. Cummings is improving," the statement said, "her condition is such that it will require a period of rest."

The former cabinet officer's wife is confined to her home, 2700 Tilden street northwest.

Taxicab Driver Reports Holdup By Two Soldiers

James A. McDonald, cab driver of 1306 Shepherd street northwest, told police last night that two soldiers he picked up near Fort Myer, Va., forced him at the point of a revolver to leave his cab after he had driven them to Fort George E. Meade, Md.

Shortly before the holdup, police were asked to arrest Raymond L. Sphmier, 22, who is wanted for desertion at Fort Myer. He is being sought in the Fort Meade area.

Dr. Owen Perrine Tells of Progress In Telephone

Unaided, the sounds of speech and music travel only a few feet, but science, by the use of electricity, has perfected instruments that transmit sound for thousands of miles with great speed. This was one of the features of the work of the Bell Telephone Laboratories of New York, described last night at Constitution Hall by Dr. Owen Perrine, who operated numerous devices on the stage to show what happens when you pick up your telephone to call your neighbor or a friend in London.

Dr. Perrine took speech apart last night, illustrated its characteristics and explained its component parts. He displayed a reproduction of the first telephone.

Dr. Perrine also had with him the "8-Ball" microphone, so named because it looks like a black billiard ball. It is of a new design, so constructed that it can "hear" sounds from any direction. Dr. Perrine explained the functions of the older microphones and compared the new one with them to illustrate latest developments in this field.

1,000 Businessmen Eat To Buy Children Glasses

Upward of 1,000 District businessmen "ate out" last night at the Reciprocity Club's oyster roast at the Mayflower, given for the benefit of underprivileged school children with faulty vision.

Proceeds will be used to buy glasses for children in the first six grades of grammar school who are found to need them, after examination in any local clinic, V. Manning Hoffman, banquet chairman, said.

Capital News In Brief

'Who Pushed Me'

Lawrence Paul Wesley, 25, of the 1000 Block of Ninth street northeast, told police that when he stepped off the curb at Eleventh and F streets northwest yesterday, he was "pushed into the side" of a taxicab.

The cab-driver, who took Wesley to Emergency Hospital, was released.

Physicians said Wesley suffered severe lacerations to the forehead and body abrasions.

Mosquitoes Elusive

A year-long search for aerial "hitch-hiking mosquitoes from South America, feared carriers of tropical and yellow fevers, resulted in the capture of only five, and they were of a non-dangerous type, the Public Health Service revealed last night.

All inter-continental planes are treated to a "disinsectization," which seemingly is proving effective, the reported revealed.

'Always Violates 'Em'

He was very earnest, considerably frightened and determined to convince Judge B. M. Hedrick, of Arlington County trial justice court, he did not knowingly drive past a stop sign.

"Ah didnt see dat sign, jedge," he declared. "Does I ever see them signs I always violates em."

Peacoat Stolen

George A. Lang, sailor on the Navy Tug Tecumseh, stationed at the Navy Yard, is determined to find his peacoat. He went ashore last night to report to District police the garment was stolen from the vessel.

WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON

About eight years ago the Board of District Commissioners decided there were too many old men in the Metropolitan Police Department and ordered a couple of dozen of them or more to retire.

One of these ancients was encountered the other day by this column, which was surprised to find that he did not have a long white beard, that he fairly hopped along instead of hobbling and probably works harder today than ever before. He is William Henry Harrison, 72.

"For one who was an 'old man' in 1931 and therefore had to step off the force, I guess I ought to be an antique today," says the inspector, a smiling, smallish fellow. "But, on the other hand, I am always on the go. Haven't missed a day at my office since I stopped wearing a uniform. In fact, I've never been sick abed in my life."

Started New Career

It was an entirely new and different career he started, upon concluding 39 years as a policeman, during which he rose from the rank of private to inspector. From pursuing criminals and enforcing the law, he went into the business of chasing real estate clients and tracking down insurance prospects. Arduous work, yes, but that's what the inspector thrives upon.

"I'd say I spend a third of my working time selling insurance, a third collecting rents and keeping my houses in repair and a third attending to the affairs of the association," he says.

The "association" is the Eastern Building and Loan, of which Mr. Harrison is treasurer, a director and member of the appraisal committee.

His principal outside interest is the Harrison Bible Class at Congress Street M. E. Church, which he founded in 1926 and has headed as president ever since. It started out with 17 members, now has more than 200. He has never missed a single one of the Sunday sessions.

Served at White House

Named after the ninth President of the United States, Mr. Harrison was born in Mount Airy, Md., on November 5, 1866. He was a railroader for one year before joining the Washington police force in 1892. He started out as a patrolman pounding a beat in Georgetown, wound up as an inspector in charge of equipment. During the McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and part of the Taft administrations he was assigned to the White House.

Today his working headquarters is at 721 Tenth street northwest. His home has been at 3282 N street northwest for the last 37 years, but in a few days he'll be moving the family to Lyon Village and into a house he bought recently.

"Why, I'm just starting to live," he said.

Four Catholic U. Law Students Win Moot Court Competition

Four law students at Catholic University last night won the right to have their names inscribed in gold on the walls of McMahon Hall, home of the legal school, when they were declared victors in the final argument in the appellate court competition.

The victors successfully contested the provisions of a will in a three-judge appeals court of the "Commonwealth of Columbia."

In announcing the decision, Associate Justice Justin Miller, of the District Court of Appeals, declared "the court had some difficulty in arriving at a conclusion in this case, for it felt that opposing counsel had done so well, singly and jointly."

Other members of the court were Associate Justices Jennings Bailey and Peyton Gordon, of the District court.

Winners of the moot court case, held in St. Ives Library, McMahon Hall, were Thomas J. Dailey, jr., Camille F. Gravel, jr., Stephen R. McNichols and John P. Moore. Their opponents were Joseph L. Alioto, William J. Brown, Edward J. Egan and Philip R. Monahan.

Father Robert J. White, dean of the law school, headed a gathering of 150 persons which heard the arguments.

'Blackwell's Island,' New Screen Attraction, Teams With Band

"BLACKWELL'S ISLAND." Warner Brothers. picturization of an original story by Crane Wilbur and Lee Katz, adapted to the screen by Mr. Wilbur, starring John Garfield, with Rosemary Lane, Stanley Fields, Victor Jory, Dick Purcell, Peggy Shannon, Morgan Conway, Granville Bates, Anthony Averill, and Charley Foy. Directed by William McGann. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Washington school teachers must have looked out on barren classlands yesterday morning for at the Eagle Theater it was obvious that most of the local wunderkinder had graduated to "College." The "College," that is, of "Musical Knowledge," over which Kay Kyser so expertly presides with his aggregation of radio favorites. The varied and entertaining stage show is coupled with "Blackwell's Island," a clumsily directed melodrama starring that fine actor, John Garfield.

"Different" is certainly the word for Prof. Kyser's amusing idea which has brought him so much adulation via the airlanes. Everyone gets a numbered ticket on entering the theater and, should his number be drawn from the little co-ed's glass bowl, he takes his place on a classroom chair. There are three contestants on each of two sides and a final heat brings the two winners together. Five bucks is the prize and if it's a tie, don't worry. We were there when the professor awarded $10 without batting an eye. The whole contest is such fun that the only people who will be having headaches over it are the Earle management. Their problem is to make the burghers move after the first dose. At 6 o'clock yesterday evening we heard some one on Thirteenth street say that now he was going to have some breakfast!

Puts on Real Show

Kyser's shiny orchestra puts on a show of its own, too. Harry Babbitt and Ginny Simms make a neat boy and girl duo in "Umbrella Man" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band" besides having solo numbers of their own. Babbitt sings "This Can't be Love" and Miss Simms has her versions of St. Louis Blues" and "Deep Purple." Sully Mason and Ish Kabibble are also on deck. A trickily lighted finale swings the entire stage into "Darktown Strutters' Ball."

John Garfield remains an excellent actor. His new film is a cinema version of 1934's New York political scandal, but it has been thrown together with amazing carelessness.

There is one episode of a police raid on the island prison in the East River that takes place at night, but when hero Garfield is tracking down villain Stanley Fields as a climax to —and in the midst of—all this, the morning sun is beating down on the freight ships that line the shore. Hollywood has for so long accustomed us to more care than this that it is almost a shock to find such slipshod cutting and directing.

Garfield Is Reporter

"Blackwell's Island" recreates the flagrant situation which existed on the island under Joey Rao, before Austin MacCormick made his raid 5 years ago. That resulted in a complete cleaning out of the city's prison system. The name of the island has since been changed to "Welfare" and it is to be hoped that the days when the prison was under the dictatorship of one of the gangster prisoners is over.

Garfield is the intrepid reporter who has uncovered the scandal and frames himself to a term in the prison to investigate its truth. Victor Jory is back as the crusading Commissioner McNair and Stanley Fields is the racketeer who instigates his own system when a wise judge sentences him for disturbing the peace. Rosemary Lane and Dick Purcell are a nurse and her policeman brother who help Garfield and there is a laugh or two from Charley Foy. For a brief scene Peggy Shannon is back on the screen as a gun moll.

But Kay Kyser's College is the magnate at the Earle and to accomodate the crowds today's first complete show will be at 9:30 this morning and the final stage and screen combination at 11 o'clock tonight.

RICHARD L. COE.

Columbia

"Pygmalion" moves into its fourth week downtown to delight George Bernard Shaw's fans with his piquant handling of the glamorization of a guttersnipe.

Critics and audiences alike have found Shaw's story amusingly engrossing. His Pygmalion is a phonetics doctor who creates a high society lady from the poor clay of a bedraggled Convent Garden flowergirl. The conversion of twangy cockney screeches to dulcet grande dame murmurs is the feat the teacher performs in innumerable hard lessons.

Leslie Howard is the consonant-counter who wins a bet with his rehabilitation of the girl, whom he grooms in speech, conduct, posture until she is successfully palmed off as a blueblood.

Wendy Hiller, the Galatea of the experiment, brings a fresh personality to the gallery of film beauties. Howard is bespectacled perfection. The cast is almost fool proof. Best of the cast of supporting actors is the man portraying the boorish, beautifully philosophic father of the flowergirl.

That the creator of the new woman falls in love with his creation is inevitable. if you know your mythology. Shaw's tongue-in-the-cheek would imply that what is called society is easily fooled by clever impostors.

An Academy award to sprightly Mr. Shaw caused that tongue to emit what is vulgarly called a razzberry." After you follow the story to its satisfying conclusion, you will know why he was awarded. Of course, it might have been due to the skillful adaptation of his story by a duet of comparatively unsung scenario writers.

A remembered scene is the one where the girl goes to her first tea, before her training is completed, and launches on a strange description of her gin-drinking mother and head-bopping father, all delivered in polished, pear-shaped diction.

'Sergeant Madden' Proves to Be A Likable Precinct Man!

Wallace Beery Stars In Film at Capitol; Has Able Support; Bowan, Peabody Hits

"SERGEANT MADDEN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of "A Gun in His Hand," by William A. Ullman, jr. adapted to the screen by Wells Root, starring Wallace Beery, with Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day, Fay Holden, Marc Lawrence, Marion Martin, David Gorcey, Ronald Haines, Ben Welden, Etta McDaniel, John Kelly, Horace MacMahon, Neil Fitzgerald, Dickie Jones, Drew Roddy and Charles Trowbridge. Directed by Josef von Sternberg. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

There is a close analogy between the subject matter of this new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production and the headline stories of the Chicago police officer whose duty compelled him to run down his own son Whether the actual facts antedated William A. Ullman's story of "A Gun in His Hand," we have no way, at the moment, of knowing. There is, nevertheless, the close relationship between actual occurence and ostensible fiction to lend this release a little more than the usual justification for its melodramatic climax.

BELL

"Sergeant Madden" is one of the king-pins, in a manner of speaking, of the New York police force. He mollifies his work as a minion of the law, as the saying goes, with a vast compassion. He is the living exemplification of that oft-doubted truism that the "cop on the beat is your best friend." Among Sergt. Madden's other predilections is a huge enthusiasm for adopting children. His home, more or less, becomes all cluttered up with them. One of the youngsters is a kid who gives promise of following in his dad's footsteps. But Dennis Madden allows his enthusiasm for firearms to get a little the better of him. He becomes a "bad boy" and forces his father to resign from the force, when he escapes from a train bound for a stretch in Sing Sing.

Support Is Excellent

Beery, of course, has been on all sides of the law in his screen assignments and here turns in a good journeyman's job of acting. Alan Curtis, Tom Brown, Fay Holden and Laraine Day are those who lend most competent support to the star in his present endeavor.

While the feature picture may fall a little short of highest standards, there is nothing to carp about in the stage bill at the Capitol this week. It has two headliners, either one of whom could carry any show in any man's theater. These topnotchers are Sibyl Bowan, who returns to the F street stage with a completely new act, and Eddie Peabody, wizard of the banjo, violin, syncopation, personal ebullience and that indefinable quality known as "showmanship."

Miss Bowan, one of the most splendid of the theater's impersonators, singers, dancers and comediennes, begins her new turn with a keen etching of the society debutante crashing "show business." This if followed by her "The Last of the First World's Fair," a character study of "Little Egypt," the original "hoochie-coochie" dancer, which was not so risque at yesterday's second performance as I had been given to believe it would be in a late Thursday night visit with this richly gifted star. The last of Miss Bowan's impressions is dedicated to the dynamic personality of Aimee Semple McPherson. It takes the star off in a whilwind of handclapping and registers her a solid hit. There is only one Sibyl Bowan.

Peabody Is Versatile

As for this Eddie Peabody fellow, he can do more things with a banjo and violin than any other specialist of whom we are aware. He was a panic, no less, yesterday afternoon. No fretted instrument has any reason to fret when Eddie is fretting the frets, if you get what I mean. His violining is not so bad, either, and his singing almost as good.

Among the others on the bill are the Hudson Wonders, two feminine acrobatic dancers of the first rank; Edwin Steffe, a barytone who seems to be crowding on the heels of Nelson Eddy, and the Lambertons, dancers, who neither hear nor speak but catch the tempo of their dances from the vibrations communicated through the floor and the ether.

Phil Lampkin's waltz overture is a nice one and a Terrytoon cartoon comedy, "The Three Bears," and Fox Movietone News complete a bill upon which the stage has a slight edge over the screen.

Play Leads in New Police Play

WALLACE BEERY AND LARAINE DAY
cast in the title role and leading feminine part, respectively, of "Sergeant Madden," this week's major screen feature at Loew's Capitol Theater. Tom Brown and Alan Curtis also are prominently cast in this film play that seems to have been suggested by recent newspaper headlines

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 31.

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: In explaining to the press her reasons for divorcing Franchot Tone, Joan Crawford stated that Franchot had been devoting too much of his interests to the Group Theater . . . The Hollywood courts have delayed until Miss Crawford's return the proceedings she had brought . . . And last night Tone notified the Group Theater that after his current engagement in "The Gentle People" he will sever all his connections with the Group.

BUSINESS DEPT.: Heywood Broun, president of the Newspaper Guild, will become the sole proprietor of the Connecticut Nutmeg next month. He will convert it into a serious weekly, keeping the former editor-owners as contributors . . . The new paper will be known as The Nutmeg, and that later will be changed to Broun's Weekly . . . Its editorial policy will advocate three things: (1) Anti-Fascism, (2) Pro-New Deal and (3) Eliminate anti-Semitism.

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT: Grover Whalen discussed with H. V. Kaltenborn the possibilities of his recording a speech, to be made from the Perisphere at the World's Fair grounds every night—and to publicize Kaltenborn's voice as "The Voice of the World" . . . "But what can I say in that speech?" Kaltenborn asked . . . "Why not," a listener suggested, "just say: 'Workers of the World —Unite!'" . . . "That's agreeable to me," Whalen acknowledged. "All you say is: 'Workers of the World—Unite'—and come to the New York World's Fair."

SOCIAL NOTES: That much-publicized meeting between Howard Hughes and Brenda Frazier, of Nassau, wasn't as glamorous as the newspapers reported . . . When Brenda acknowledged her introduction to the producer-aviator, who is hard of hearing, and said: "Pleased to meet you," Howard replied: "What?"

FOREIGN DISPATCH: Lord Castlerosse, the British columnist, confided from hospital bed last week: "I'm only a poor columnist, but I've one claim to fame as an international writer" . . . "And what is that?" Castlerosse was asked . . . "I'm the only journalist in the world," he answered, "who doesn't know exactly what's in Hitler's and Mussolini's minds."

SPORTS DEPT.: Max Baer was very much disappointed when he learned that Tony Galento would get the chance to fight Joe Louis here in June . . . "Well, I guess it serves me right for hanging around those night clubs," Baer lamented. "I made the rounds better than I fought 'em."

MOVIE DEPARTMENT: Warner Brothers, in a hunt for suitable topics in connection with their patriotic movie shorts series, asked a number of outstanding Americans to serve on a committee of 100 to help select significant events in American history . . . Will Durant, the historian, was invited to join the committee . . . "I'm writing a history of civilization," he replied to Jack Warner, "and won't reach the United States chapter until 1950. Until then I don't know enough about American history."

POLITICS: District Attorney Geoghan, of Brooklyn, who is being subjected to attack because two special prosecutors have been appointed by the Governor during Geoghan's regime, visited the Stork Club last night with Jimmy Durante . . . Geoghan was asked whether he plans to seek vindication by becoming a candidate for re-election this fall . . . "My fate," he answered, "is in my party's hands."

ILLUSTRATED SECTION: St. Clair McKelway of the New Yorker wrote the flattering "Profile of Bill Robinson," which appeared in that magazine . . . A few days after it appeared, McKelway visited Robinson and asked for an autographed picture . . . "After those nice things you wrote about Bill," said Mrs. Robinson, "you're sure you want only an autographed picture?" . . . McKelway nodded, and so the Robinsons retired to another room and emerged with a photo on which was inscribed: "To St. Clair McKelway, one of my greatest admirers—Bill Robinson."

EMILY POST DEPT.: Harry Hershfield, the perennial after-dinner speaker, discussed the speech-making business with George Jessel, another banquet devotee . . . "What bothers me," Jessel confessed, "is when the audience starts looking at their wrist watches" . . . "That's nothing," Hershfield assured. "What bothers me is when they look at their wrist watches—and then start shaking 'em."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: A new bill will be introduced at Albany soon, and its passage will eliminate most of the libel verdicts rendered in New York . . . It will provide that a publication may not be sued for libel if, within 10 days after the libelous article appears and after due notification, it publishes a retraction, devoting to it the same space and prominence as the original article.

'Love Affair' Is Held Over At Keith's

Though "Love Affair" came easily into town last week without any especial fanfare, it has gained momentum and popularity with every showing—is now running along like a forest fire.

There are the best of reasons for this great success. "Love Affair" is one of the most potently beautiful, flashingly gay and deeply appealing of cinemas. It is directed with consummate skill and perfect pacing. Charles Boyer's performance is subtly colored in the best Boyer manner—meaning, that it has lightness, finesse and strength. Irene Dunne offers the best performance of her life—sparkling, delicate, amusing—but with a shimmer of unshed tears. That wonderful old lady, Maria Ouspenskaya, a consummate actress, completely takes her every scene. Yes, "Love Affair" is due to be rated as one of the best pictures of the year on sheer fineness of direction and acting. The picture has everything.

In actual event and development, the story is a bit on the gossamer side. But it is so gemmed with pretty, laugh-provoking and pathetic incident, so deftly unwound with full complements of complications, that it leaves one with that satisfied-surprised feeling of having enjoyed the privilege of seeing a tremendous yarn unfolded. And so you have, because it's never the plot of a story, it's the build-up and the way it's told.

A completely magical angle on "Love Affair" is the adroit way it skips around perilous situations—and in the best taste. There is no finagling with the sorry factual lay-out of life as it is lived. But even the Hayes office could find no fault with Producer-Director Leo McCarey's superlative judgment in using the indicative mood without unfortunate underscoring.

To this critic the performance of Irene Dunn has the recent achievements of gilded "Oscar" winners completely backed off the map. It represents the combination of the best characteristics of Miss Dunne's two great movie successes—the effervescent glisten of "The Awful Truth" and the simple earnestness of "Cimarron."

There is a masterful "March of Time," also Walt Disney's rollicking newest, "Society Dog Show." They're both worth the price of admission. But if you miss "Love Affair"—then you're also the sort of person who wouldn't bother to see the cherry blossoms.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 31.—I'm wondering which studio will make a picture based on the life story of Ralph Graham, the Bel Air burglar, who crashed Hollywood society by way of the second story. And has had the time of his life meeting those he robbed, having his candid opinions about them published, and being photographed with Tyrone Power. And Hollywood wonders why the outside world gets a bad impression of us! Isn't there anyone in Hollywood who can control this sort of thing? If we're not careful, the outside world will believe that everyone in Hollywood has his pet gambler.

HOPPER

The other night, Graham dined in one of our very best cafes with five deputy sheriffs. Sitting in the next booth was the Vicar of Jardin who married the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. What a world!

The Gary Coopers were more distressed at the loss of a bedspread than over their valuables. Seems Graham dumped everything—jewels, guns, silver, everything—in the middle of the bed and carried 'em out in the bedspread which was made of special processed white velvet. It took eight weeks to replace it.

Mrs. Ken Maynard has inaugurated a new service: The Hollywood Cavalier. Her slogan is "Call a Cavalier when Cocktailing!" One will appear if needed, in evening clothes, take owner's keys, assist him to his car, drive him safely home, and even tuck him into bed—if necessary. She has 12 husky college boys whose fingerprints have been sent to Washington and oked. Snappy service, what? Wonder where she got that idea?

When I got my last driver's license, they took a print of my thumb. I asked why they didn't take the whole hand. "Hold on a minute, lady. Most of Hollywood refuses even that. You see, it's not compulsory."

Before Joseph Schildkraut, who plays a heavy in "The Man with the Iron Mask," would do a scene in which he goes into a cathedral and kills a priest, he talked it over with a rabbi and a priest for their advice. In these days, it would seem a very dangerous thing to show a Jew killing a Catholic, even on a motion picture screen.

Madeleine Carroll doesn't know it, but Walter Wanger is making her a present of the James Montgomery Flagg portrait of her which hung so long in his office. The portrait is valued at $1,500. Wonder who suggested getting it out of Walter's office?

Prejudiced ones, and some still are, will be disappointed when they see a trailer for "Gone." The company isn't showing a close-up of either Scarlett or Rhett. The trailer gives out no flashes. You'll have to pay to see 'em!

Some of our people are still wondering how Ella Winter, wife of Donald Ogden Stewart, got into the closed meeting of the Writers' Guild.

Erroll Flynn will ride a $25,000 saddle in the parade at Dodge City—that's more silver than saddle!

No truth to the report that Brynie Foy is going to make "Washington Heights."

When Annie Sheridan was told she'd get 12 leading men for the "Oomph Girl" picture, she drawled "The Dead End kids and who else?"

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 31 (I.N.S.).—Margaret Lockwood, whose resemblance to the new brunette, Joan Bennett, is so marked I couldn't help commenting on it when I reviewed "The Lady Vanishes," did not sail on the Normandie for home, hubby and England as advertised. Instead, the Lockwood trunks, which had been shipped ahead when she finished "Sussanah of the Mounties," are being sent back to Hollywood for the very good reason that she goes immediately into the best role of her career—the femme lead opposite Douglass Fairbanks, jr., in "Ruler of the Sea." The little British actress was so good in her test she won the part hands down—and there was plenty of competition.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I say that because Frank Lloyd had five important stars tested at the Paramount studio and not one of them compared to the Lockwood girl who has an interesting personality and can act. This is her best break because, even though she did receive good notice for "The Lady Vanishes," a foreign-made movie never does as much for a star as one of the good old U. S. variety.

Myrna Loy is becoming almost as piqued at playing "The Perfect Wife" as she was when she was typed as the slant-eyed Oriental vamp for so many years. And to prove that she means it she begins her change of pace as Lady Esketh in "The Rains Came," followed by another gal-who-ain't all-she-oughta-be in "Sea of Grass," with Spencer Tracy. Seems funny to think of practical Myrna in the role of a woman who deserts her husband, has an illegitimate child and repents and repents—but that's the plot of her costarring picture with Spence, however, the censors need 't start having headaches right away since it won't be filmed until Tracy returns from his European jaunt —and in the meantime the rough spots will be deleted from the script.

Evidently, the campaign to make a glamour girl of Jean Parker (have you noticed all the alluring pictures of her in the fan mags?) has come to naught. Today Jean was signed at Monogram for the hearts and flowers heroine of Gene Stratton Porter's "Her Father's Daughter." Perhaps it's just as well, since Hollywood is overrun with glamour, and somebody has to play the ingenues. Come to think of it, Monogram has had a gold strike in these wholesome Porter stories in the past with "Girl of the Limberlost," "Keeper of the Bees" and several others.

Chatter in Hollywood: Very quietly and without any ballyhoo, Edwina Mandel got her divorce today from the wealthy Chicago merchant—but since the suit was held here it will be at least a year before she and Eddie Sutherland can make their trip to the minister. Strangely enough, Mrs. Mandel obtained her divorce on the very day Nancy Lee gave a divorce party for Audrey Sutherland, Eddie's former wife, who married and parted from Ben Edwards in the meantime.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Youthful Margaret Roach, daughter of Hal, denies she is planning an elopement with Robert Paige. "If we marry," she says, "it won't be until I am older." Very wise of her. Florence Rice and Robert Wilcox deluged with cables in Honolulu following their surprise marriage. Florence is Grantland's daughter and Bob was former Joy Hodges' fiance. Lili Damita is weekending in Palm Springs with Dolores Del Rio and Cedric Gibbons while Errol is knocking them dead in "Dodge City." He will join her there later. Virginia and Darryl Zanuck and the children have taken Joseph Schenck's Palm Springs house for a brief holiday; Ann and Jack Warner reach home tomorrow. Last minute business prevented their stopping at Dodge City for the big shindig; Buddy Rogers and Mary Pickford, looking extremely happy, at Earl Carrol's; Mena Quevley Morgan, talented sculptress and wife of Brewster Morgan, having an exhibit of her work at the Stanley Rose Gallery.

Barbara Stanwyck, hostess to the Jack Bennys; Adrianne Ames and Sinclair Lewis dining tete-a-tete. Lewis, famous wife, Dorothy Thompson, is due soon to lecture, and you can depend upon all the news gatherers being there; Claude Rains, his wife and Jennifer have gone to their farm in Pennsylvania for the spring planting; Metro will reissue "San Francisco," which should be of interest at the World's Fair; Nicholas and Pansy Schenck train in Monday; Basil Rathbone, who read "Manfrel" to 8,000 people, is back from his San Francisco trip; Greer Garson gets here Monday and M-G-M expects big things after "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," is released; Sara Hamilton, Hollywood movie writer, leaves Monday for a personal look at New York and to confer with her magazine boss, Ernie Heyn. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Worthy of review, if you don't mind, are the startling developments of the past few days.

Of course, the No. 1 surprise of the week was the news of that secret codicil in the will of the late Col. Jake Ruppert. It ought to silence the loud demands that the Yankees be broken up for the good of the game. That, apparently, was what the Colonel, too, was thinking when he called in his attorneys and prepared for the disposal of his earthly holdings.

POVICH

Ruppert's posthumous orders that the Yankees be broken up at the end of the 1939 season and their talent distributed around the league affords a new insight into the character of the man. While he lived, Ruppert was never the one to pull his punches. He gloried in the crushing triumphs of his Yanks. He was pitiless in building up a machine that would beat down all opposition. But with the revelation that he gave specific orders that the Yankees should be dismantled at the end of this season for the good of the league, who can say that he did not have compassion on his enemies?

Nearly as surprising was the release of Outfielder Charley Keller to the minors by Manager Joe McCarthy. Keller, the Maryland University boy who starred for the Yankees' Newark farm, was supposed to be the rookie of the year. He could do everything, to hear the critics tell it. He might even outhit DiMaggio. He was a cinch to break into the Yankees' outfield. Managers were staking their reputations on Keller's ability to make good in the big league. Inspired pieces about Keller were tapped out by the baseball correspondents. American League fans would see plenty of Kellar this season, they wrote. And, indeed they will if they take the trouble to go to Newark.

"Fans Spared Chopping Block Spectacle"

What promised to be a lively outdoor season in the heavyweight fight division in New York has been dampened somewhat by the action of Gov. Herbert Lehman. But at least fight fans will be spared the spectacle of Joe Louis making a chopping block of Tony Galento. There was no indication, however, that Gov. Lehman would step in and forbid the fight, until he did do it. For that he deserves some kind of a medal.

It was not a particularly pleasant week-end, either, for George Preston Marshall, who owns the Washington Redskins. Like a bolt from the blue came the news that Slingin' Sammy Baugh had not only purchased a ranch in Texas but that he was retiring to it. Slingin' Sammy will spend his time pitching steers instead of football, his professional career now safely behind him. For the Redskins it means disaster. With Baugh, they were always a threat. Without Baugh they are push-overs.

After all these years of inanities the United States Lawn Tennis Association has finally earned somebody's respect. It was a bold move by the U. S. L. T. A. when it voted to stay out of the Davis Cup tennis play in 1939 if Germany, Italy and Japan compete. It was expected that somebody in America would soon take a stand against the totalitarian states, but that it would be the U. S. L. T. A. was totally unexpected.

"Even Griffith Admits Nats Can't Win"

Just as startling was the scratching of El Chico out of the Kentucky Derby. The son of John P. Grier, undisputed champion of America's 2-year-olds last season, was a 4-to-1 shot in the Derby's winter books and may have gone to the post atless than 2 to 1 on Derby Day. El Chico is just one more victim of the jinx that has beset Derby favorites. Top Flight and Chance Play were cut down just a few weeks before Derbies in which they, too, were favorites. With El Chico out, the Derby becomes a wide open race with the backers of Technician, Johnstown, Benefactor and Challedon undoubtedly chortling.

The Washington Club didn't escape the tide of untoward developments, either. When Judge Landis ruled that the Philadelphia Athletics had prior title to Roberto Ortiz and ordered Clark Griffith to turn the big Cuban pitcher over to Connie Mack, it was a terrific blow to the Washington camp. Ortiz, despite his crudeness, is a genuine pitching prospect and in future years when he is winning 20 games a season for the A's, Griffith will rue the time spent developing the young pitcher he didn't own.

Surprising, too, was Joe Louis' decision to abdicate his heavyweight title, but no more startling than Jock Sutherland's return to Pittsburgh as head coach after quitting the job three weeks ago. And lending a new note to spring training campaigns was Clark Griffith's admission that his Washington club had no chance to win the pennant. All of these things contrived to give the sports scene its most eventful week in years.

Ho! Ho! April Fool!

With Considine

New York, March 31.—An old gaffer named Fred Goldsmith died the other day in Berkeley, Mich. Some of the papers carried a line or two on him. A couple of them said he was the first man who ever pitched a curved ball. Most of them didn't even mention the death.

Behind that obscure item lay a poignant story.

CONSIDINE

On March 23 Frankie Menke, author of the Encyclopedia of Sports," received a letter from Mrs. Ellen Goldsmith Stieler, daughter of Goldsmith. Earlier she had written him to tell him she thought he was wrong in attributing the first curve ball to a bygone baseball hero named Cummings. She said her father was the first man who ever made a ball change the course of its normal flight. Menke answered her letter, promising to check up on the claim, and this was Mrs. Stieler's reply:

"Dear Mr. Menke:

"I want to thank you for showing interest in my letter concerning the proof we have of my dad's being the first to use the curve ball.

"But your letter came too late to bring any comfort to him, as he now lays on his deathbed and will probably have passed on by the time this letter reaches you. He has suffered from a chronic heart ailment for some years, and when he read of the credit for the curve's origin being given to Cummings, in the picture called "A Century of Baseball," it was a serious blow to him and he never recovered from it.

Yellowed Clipping Tells Tale

"I told him I would make the facts about him known to you and believed you would be interested enough at least to see that they were printed, so that people of the present might know of him as they did years ago. He seemed satisfied for a time, but when I didn't immediately hear from you he started to grieve again. His state of mind aggravated the heart condition to such an extent that he went to bed to stay.

"The doctor told me today that it will be but a matter of hours until he is gone. He has been in a semiconscious state for a week and is now in a coma. Whatever you do, or have done, to bring honor to his name in your writings, I am most grateful for your efforts."

Inclosed in the envelope was a yellowed clipping from the August 17, 1870, issue of the Brooklyn Eagle. It was written by the first baseball writer, Henry Chadwick, whose word was gospel. This is what Chadwick wrote, and this is what the world forgot:

"Fred Goldsmith has won fame by developing a ball that twists, proving to countless skeptics that a sphere can cheat natural laws.

"Yesterday at the Capitoline grounds a large crowd assembled and cheered lustily as the youth from New Haven demonstrated to the satisfaction of all that a baseball could be so manipulated and controlled by throwing it from one given point to another as to make a pronounced arc in space.

Died of Broken Heart

"The test was made by drawing a chalkline on the ground a distance of 45 feet from one extremity to the other. An 8-foot pole was driven in an upright position at one end. Another pole was driven in the same manner halfway between the two end poles, planted directly on the line. Now everything was set for the test. Goldsmith was placed on the left side of the chalkline near the end pole facing the pole at the other end. The purpose of this was that the ball delivered from the thrower's hand was to cross the line, circle the center pole and return to the same side of the line from which it was thrown, before reaching the far pole.

"This feat was successfully accomplished six or eight times and that which up to this point seemed an optical illusion and against all rules of philosophy was now an established fact.—Henry Chadwick, Editor."

Thus was born the curve—then a consternating bit of magic, now the property of every pitcher beyond the age of 10. It is a common thing now, the importance of its origin long since erased. But in the heart of one man its origin was important. The memory of it must have been the thing which carried him along beyond the span of mankind. Perhaps he lived until this centennial of baseball, knowing that his fabulous discovery would then be honored. But when at last the time came, the credit went to another man, and Goldsmith can in truth be said to have died of a broken heart.

Sherwood Loses, 25-20, In Tourney

W.B.C. Senators Take 105-Pound Crown, Beating Alexandria Boys Club Quint

Staving off its opponents' belated rush in the closing period of a warmly contested game, the Rockville A. A. girls team defeated Sherwood, 25-20, for its third consecutive District A. A. U. championship and eighty-third consecutiv victory last night at Eastern High School.

In the 135-pound class Northeast Flashes and Stewart Photographers survived their semifinal tests, defeating Eckington Bakers, 32-20, and Metropolitan Police Boys Club, 32-10, respectively.

Rockville, one of the smoothest and strongest sextets ever turned out in this area, got off to a 9-5 lead in the first half, but found its supremacy seriously challenged in the second by the aggressive and determined Sherwood lassies. Sherwood, incidentally, had almost as many shots at the basket, but was unable to cash in on its opportunities. Rockville, on the other hand, made most of its attempts good.

Sherwood took the upper hand in the struggle as the second half opened, assuming a slender 10-9 lead. Margaret Howard's field goal off-set this, however, sending Rockville back into the lead at 11-10. From then on it was a point-for-point duel. Katherine Adamson counted for Sherwood and Gene Smith countered for Rockville.

Margaret Lanier, who was closely guarded throughout the entire evening, found the range and prodded the court to 20-15 for Rockville. But Ruth Hill, high scorer of the evening who played brilliantly for Sherwood, put her mates back in the running with another brace of field goals.

Baltimore's Alley Owners May Withdraw

Baltimore alley owners, who control over one-fourth of the sanctioned alleys of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, threatened to withdraw from the body in an unexpected move in the annual meeting here last night.

If carried out, the action would bring the body that has grown steadily for 13 years back to its original state. The spokesman for the Baltimoreans declared the alley owners wanted more uniformity of alleys, and declared that the town was "paying the freight" of the organization but did not control it, as it should. A substitute Alley Owners Association of America was offered.

The meeting was adjourned with no decision, but the Baltimoreans were to iron out the difficulties with members of the executive committee, for a possible settlement. The fact that the bowlers themselves may be quite satisfied with the organization and balk at any plan of the alley owners to unsettle it may force them back into the fold should they carry out the threat.

Bronson Quaites, pioneer in local women's bowling promotion, was elected the first woman president the fold, should they carry out the Blake, Atlanta, was elected first vice president; Rocco Sagarino, Hartford, second vice president. The third and fourth posts were left open, to be filled by Baltimore and North Carolina representatives. George Isemann was retained as secretary, and A. J. Fant treasurer.

The greatest contingent of pinspillers ever to converge on a single city will bowl at Lucky Strike today when the New England and Southern delegations take their crack at the national titles. Action will start at noon and continue until midnight.

Armstrong Wins Over Day By T.K.O. in 12

Henry's Eye Cut Badly And Knuckle Broken Retaining Welter Title

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 31.—For 11 vicious rounds Henry Armstrong exploded his dark dynamite on the rock-bound chin of gallant Davey Day, of Chicago, to no avail, but the pressure of the pounding proved too much at last and Hammerin' Hank retained his welterweight title by scoring a technical knockout in 2:49 seconds of the twelfth round of their scheduled 15-round battle here tonight.

A crowd of 10,028 paid $29,008 to see the fray. Armstrong weighed 135, Day 136.

Henry's Eye Cut

Up to that point it was as hard and tough a bout as the title-honored Madison Square Garden had ever seen. After being punched from ring-post to ring-post through the first four rounds, Day started to come on.

Although his right eye was closed tight from the barrage, he went to work in the seventh and opened a nasty gash alongside Henry's right eye. He worked on this advantage the rest of the way, but, thanks to the administrative between-rounds work of the wise Doc Bagley, called to Armstrong's corner as a second only this afternoon, the cut partly closed to a point where it gave no trouble.

In the final analysis, it was, as always, that awful pace the title lightweight-welterweight king sets that told the story in the forty-fifth straight victory of the string he started nearly three years ago.

May Cancel Bout

For the 11 full rounds the fight worn victor and Day a tired, bruised stablemate Barney Ross, who was beaten by the same Armstrong fists a year ago, was in there swinging. The score card through the eleventh showed seven rounds for Henry and four for the dark-haired Windy City fighter. Two of Day's rounds, however, were the result of Armstrong's low blows in the fifth and eleventh.

After the fight, Armstrong was a worn victor and Day a tired bruised victim. If anything, Armstrong showed more effects from the struggle. Day's only marks were a closed right eye and a sore nose. Armstrong not only needed four stitches to sew up the slash along his left eye, but Dr. Vincent Nardiello, after examining the astonishing Henry, announced the big knuckle on the index fingen of his left hand had been broken, and that his right fist was badly bruised.

Henry's injuries may necessiate his calling his welterweight title bout in London against British Champion Ernie Roderick in May. Dr. Nardiello said an X-ray examination would be made of his hands later tonight to determine whether he could return to fighting trim before that time.

Harris to 'Break' Estalella to Curves

Nats' Manager Plans to Feed Him Hooks Until He Learns to Hit Fancy Pitching; Sees Young Cuban as Asset in Outfield

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bradenton, Fla., March 31.—On orders of Manager Bucky Harris, Washington pitchers will serve Bobby Estalella only curve balls whenever the little Cuban outfielder is taking his turn in batting practice. Harris is theorizing that if Estalella sees enough curveball pitching he will overcome what appears to be a weakness.

"He's going to see plenty of curves after the season opens and he might as well practice swinging at 'em now," explained Harris.

In placing Estalella on a curveball diet, Harris is hoping that the Cuban will add a terrific punch to the Nats' outfield. He is satisfied that Estalella can hit fast-ball pitching, but he fears that the American League hurlers won't take orders from the Cuban.

"Bobby has been doing well for us this Spring," said Harris. "He has been showing me more power at bat than anybody on the club. But the pitchers he's been facing have not been working on him. They feed him that fast ball and he murders it. If the word get around in the American League that he doesn't hit a hook so well, that's all he'll see. And, you may depend upon it, the world will get around."

Tremendous Asset

Harris pictures the Cuban as a tremendous asset barring what may be a flaw in his hitting. Estalella has not only been slaughtering the spring pitching he has seen thus far, but he has developed into the fanciest and most capable outfielder among the Nats' regular trio which also includes Taft Wright and George Case. He has shown an ability to go far for a fly ball and there isn't a throwing arm among

Yuma, Ariz., March 31.—Rookie Bob Lillard, erstwhile third baseman, displaying midseason form, gave up only four hits today in nine innings as the Chicago Cubs defeated their city rivals, the White Sox, 2 to 0.

The game was scoreless until the sixth when Hank Lieber doubled, went to third on Joe Marty's fly to the outfield and scored on Gus Mancuso's single. In the eighth the Sox donated the second run. John Whitehead walked Lieber and Marty, the former scoring when the pitcher threw the ball into the outfield on Phil Cavarretta's sacrifice.

Stant, C. U., Gains Finals At Madison

Bunsa, Cards, Loses; Barksdale, Virginia, Forced to Withdraw

Madison, Wis., March 31.—Catholic University placed one boxer in the National Intercollegiate boxing tournament finals that will be held here Saturday nigh tas Fred Stant, Washington middleweight, whipped Ray Kramer, of Wisconsin, to win the right to beat Ed McKinnon, of Washington State.

Joe Bunsa, also of Catholic U., was whipped by Heston Daniels, of Louisiana State University, in the 155-pound semi-finals, while Ashby Barksdale, Virginia's lon esemi-finalist, was forced to forfeit to Anthony Guida, of Temple, due to an arm infection. As a result, Guida, who drew a first-round bye, advanced to the 145-pound finals without a bout. He will meet Omer Crocker, Wisconsin's knockout sensation.

Heston Daniels, Southeastern Conference champion from L. S. U., eliminated Catholic U.'s Joe Bunsa in a one-sided 155-pound bout. Daniels outboxed his foe in the first round and dropped hmi in the second with a powerful left and right-hand blows to the head. Bunsa tried hard to catch Daniels in the third but the fresher L. S. U. boxer stayed out of range.

Fred Stant, of Catholic U., entered the 165-pound finals by beating Ray Kramer, of Wisconsin. Kramer's good right hand never had a chance as Stant combined an effecthe defense with scoring rights to the head and body.

Bobby Jones Scores a 76 On First Day

Sammy Snead Takes Second Place With A 70 in Masters Tourney at Augusta

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., March 31.—Firing approaches stiff to the flag, Billy Burke, 37-year-old veteran of many golf battles, stole the show today in the Augusta national tournament that brought out of retirement the one-time maestro of the fairways—Robert T. Jones, jr.

While the 37-year-old Bobby Jones—master of ceremonies at this so-called world series of golf—drew the bigger portion of the watchful galleries, Burke breezed home with a spectacular 69, 3 under par, and a stroke lead for the opening round of the 72-hole $5,000 classic.

Jones started off with an outgoing par 36 in his sixth annual appearance here since he went into retirement in 1930, following his "grand slam," but dissipated gallery hopes by taking an incoming 40. His opening round 76 total found him in a tie with five other veterans for twenty-eighth place.

Battle For Lead

Down the stretch of the inaugural round, played under a beaming sun and a strong northwest wind, it was a battle between Burke, the fellow who won the 1931 National Open crown at Toledo, and Slammin' Sammy Snead, the West Virginia walloper, for the lead.

Burke, whose best finish in the Augusta classic was third at 296 in 1934 when the Bob Jones show first took the stage, and Snead both negotiated the outgoing nine in 33 shots, 4 under par. Coming back, however, the Cleveland veteran kept poking the ball right up to the cup for an incoming 37 as Snead took 38 blows and trailed by a stroke.

Two former winners of the Augusta classic, Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., as well as Tommy Armour, of Chicago, the Silver Scot who won the National Open crown in 1927, finished the day's proceedings in a three-way tie for third place with 71s.

Sinks Long Putts

Jones played with Picard, who won here a year ago with a 283 total. Picard dropped putts of 35 feet and more to gain his sub-par 71 and Bob knocked in two of 25 and 20 feet on the first nine holes. Jones, however, ran into trouble on a couple of holes on the second nine and finished four shots over standard figures.

Putting was costly for both Snead and Nelson. Slammin' Sam took three putts on the tenth and four-of the organization, while Morgan New York Aathletic Club's fine relay team seat a world record of 3:31.3 for the 400-yard free style event tonight in the National A. A. U. swimming championships, giving the Gothamites a three-point lead for the team championship now held by Ohio State University.

The New York A. C. ripped a tenth of a second off the 3:31.4 world mark set in 1937 by the University of Michigan, and beat Yale University's freshmen by 5 yards. The Yale varsity was third and Ohio State's defending champs fourth.

The relay victory, in which Tom McDermott, Jim Reilly, Walter Spence and Peter Fick represented the New York A. C., gave that club 20 points for the first seven events, three ahead of Ohio State. The winning team split the world record about equally. Fick paced the quartet with a 51.1 performance, Spence's time was 52.2, Reilly made his 100 yards in 53.2 and McDermott in 54.5.

Ohio State, in losing the relay crown, was the second defending champion deposed tonight. In the 220-yard free style, Jack Medica, of the New York A. C., splashed to victory in 2:12.7, defeating the defending titleholder, Ralph Flanagan, of Austin, Tex.

Detroit Sends Poffenberger To Toledo Club

Lakeland, Fla., March 31 (AP).—The pruning process started in the Detroit Tiger camp today and the men to depart were Cletus Elwool Poffenberger, rotund young pitcher, and Frank Secory, rookie outfielder, both of whom will join the Toledo club of the American Association, on option.

At the same time, General Manager Jack Zeller disclosed that Frank (Pinky) Higgins, veteran third-sacker, would go to Beaumont, Tex., when the Tigers break camp to get in condition. Higgins, obtained from the Boston Red Sox in a trade, has been idle because of spike wounds and doctors say he will not be able to discard his crutches until next week.

Poffenberger has shown much promise as a pitcher in the two years he has been with the Tigers, but has been at odds with the management frequently over training rules.

New Orleans, March 31 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians today returned Pitcher Clay Smith, 23-year-old Cambridge, Kans., right-hander, to Wilkes-Barre of the Eastern League, which in turn released him outright.

Blazing Heat, Paying $6.10, Takes Feature Race at Bowie

Sure Miss Is Beaten 4 Lengths

Long Shots Romp In Fifth and Sixth Races; 6,000 Attend Despite Cold Day

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., March 31.—Blazing Heat, not named for the big freeze that forced the canceling of last fall's meeting here, turned on the heat in the stretch today and won the fourth race that served feature purposes on an ordinary program at this turf center. A lukewarm favorite at a $6.10 mutuel, Blazing Heat had a margin of four lengths over her nearest opposition, Sure Miss, at the end of the six-furlong test.

In addition to Blazing Heat, another "hot" horse, Blazearound, was a winner on the program, but neither was half as hot as those who bet on Anticosti, an odds-on favorite, in the third race. A sensational worker, Anticosti drew tons of money. She had a good lead in the early stretch but suddenly bolted out of Jockey Mannie Berg's grip and went to the outside fence. Berg finally pointed her along the rail and she appeared to have finished right with the leaders.

However, when the official photo was developed, Anticosti was not shown. She was skimming the outside fence and the camera did not catch her. She was "out of the picture" and "out of the money" as far as the official decision was concerned. Opinion was divided among the chart-callers as to her position at the end. However, no one called her worse than third.

6,000 Attend

Blazing Heat was given a well-judged run by Jockey Charlie Stevenson, who won the Maryland Racing Writers' award for the leading rider here last fall. She was rated for most of the trip and moved up swiftly when placed to a drive to draw far out.

Although the track was heavy, conditions overhead were good for the crowd of 6,000. The program produced a mixture of long and short shots that kept most of the bettors in a good mood.

Upsets marked the fifth and sixth races. In the fifth Lourdes, making her first Maryland start of 1939, carried 103 pounds to an easy victory over Fight Back, Panorama and four others in a test of a mile and a sixteenth to bring her backers a $31.30 mutuel. In the sixth Albert D caused a surprise under a good ride by Mannie Berg, bringing a $22.50 payoff while leading Mon Doit to the wire. Elsie J, a member of the mutuel "field" and Interpreter, finished in a dead heat for third money.

Eva R. Wins

Almost co-favorites in the betting, Eva R. and Irene's Bob battled it out most of the way in the first race with the former holding a half-length edge at the wire. Transit Lady was third in the field of a dozen ordinary sprinters going 6 furlongs. Apprentice A. Snider never gave up knocking on Eva R. and she regained the lead after being topped by Irene's Bob in the stretch run. The 7-year-old daughter of Omond paid $6.70 and was clocked in 1:16.

Making her first start of the year, Fyan made good while well backed in the second race. In the colors of P. Da Lee Watts Fyan produced a $7.30 mutuel and put the finishing touches on a $16.30 daily double. The 5-year-old mare finished a length in advance of Quiet Time with Clever Girl third. Jockey Henri Mora had Fyan in front at the break and kept her there throughout.

The crowd backed Anticosti down to -80 cents on the dollar in the third race. The filly held what appeared to be a safe lead to the stretch and then bolted to the outside fence. When this happened Blazearound drove into the lead and took the verdict in a photo finish. Distort was second and Abbot's Lark was third. Blazearound was a $14.10 shot. The official photo did not show Anticosti.

IRENE'S BOB broke well back, was hustled to lead and weakened after getting to front under weak handling. TRANSIT LADY was keen factor from start and held on gamely. CLEVER GIRL, off sluggishly, gained sharply on outside leaving backstretch and hung in final drive. HE GOES saved ground entering stretch and closed with good energy. PANORAMA was away poorly and moved up menacingly entering stretch, but weakened from early usage.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Bowie, Md., March 31.

Dear Al:

Aaron Herwitz, proprietor of the Bowie general store and the man credited with keeping Clocker Mike from starving, has taken out a trainer's license and will condition his own horses. His barn now includes Chiliad and Ginger Hackle. Respac, destroyed after a spill here opening day, was insured. Armaganac has gone lame. J. B. Zelk, of Charlottesville, Va., has eight horses here and has signed Jockey George Witmer to do his riding. L. H. Nimkoff has sold Venetian, Misled and Ahriam to Mrs. Mose Simon at private terms. Her hubby, former Jockey Simon, will train the group. These horses will be Charles Town bound after Pimlico. Speaking of Charles Town, Greg Johnson is taking stall applications and has more than 200 already. The lists for stalls are subject to the approval of President Al Boyle. Although only six horses are named for the $5,000 added Bowie Handicap, today's program should be an interesting one. Horses from California, Arkansas and Florida, as well as two stay-at-homes are scheduled to face the start. High Velocity and Challephen will be making their first start of the year. Bunny Baby was nowhere in the Rowe Memorial opening day here after campaign in New Orleans. Unheralded, purchased by B. F. Christmas here last fall, raced at Oaklawn. Hypocrite carried the Ral Parr colors in California, while Short Distance performed in Florida. High Velocity is the probable favorite due to a liking for this track. Jockey R. Donoso, who was little known last fall, returned yesterday. He had a good season in Florida. Jockey Eddie Smith retains his broad smile despite his spill the other day. Mantagna, performing here as a plater, is the same horse that won a Widener at Hialeah a few years back. BILL.

First race—Tony Pandy received a liberal education in good efforts behind the best juveniles of the Florida season and appears to have a slight edge over Nosy, a strong contender from New Orleans. The latter was second in the Lafayette Handicap at the Fair Grounds and may prove hard to beat. Din has a money chance.

Second race—Early Times finished well to capture second place opening day with this company and, with an off track in prospect, he figures to be on the head end at the wire. Marcabala broke poorly last outing at New Orleans, but may redeem himself today. Dark Friend should go well over the Bowie strip.

Third race—Jean C turned in an even effort in good company in Florida, has speed, and figures best on class. Fiddle Faddle, usually slow to get started, will be making a hot pace in the final drive and should get up for the place award. Nicholas S can better poor recent efforts in Florida.

Fourth race—White Cockade disappointed his backers recently in a handicap at the Fair Grounds, but on his best form all winter he gets high figure over these platers. Kenty was a winner at Oaklawn and has shown good efforts with good company; looks best. Zosters can win it if fit; probably needs a race.

Fifth race—High Velocity likes the Bowies track and has the speed to turn back this field in the Bowie Handicap. Has worked well for this event and has the class. Bunny Baby went well opening day in the Rowe and may be the one to beat. Challephen won the Southern Handicap last spring and may be a dangerous factor.

Seventh race—The Elliott entry of Bounding Count and Count Tetrarch stands out in the closing feature, as both campaigned very successfully over this track last year. Need only be fit. Lucre Lude, up from New Orleans, appears the best of the others. Ruffy raced over his head at Santa Anita; chance here.

Best—WHITE COCKADE.

Bunny Austin Arrives For Lecture Tour

New York, March 31 (AP).—H. W. "Bunny" Austin, British Davis Cup tennis star, arrived aboard the S.S. Aquitania today to attempt to organize American sportsmen in the "MRA—Moral Re-Armament" plan advocated by the Oxford Group.

Austria described the plan as "the one constructive answer to all crises—the one program on which leaders of every faction can agree." Its four cardinal principles, he said, were honesty, purity, unselfishness and love.

Austin said he planned to make speeches at sports events throughout the United States and later hoped to re-enter Davis Cup competition.

Maryland Nine Meets Strong Rutgers Team Today

Lacrossemen Also See Action

Face Mt. Washington OfBaltimoreinDebut; Springer to Pitch

The University of Maryland presents its first double-barrelledoffering of the spring sports season this afternoon, meeting Rutgers in baseball and Mount Washington of Baltimore in lacrosse.

It will be the stickmen's debut of the season and the second game for the nine, which lost its opener to Ohio State, 4-3, Monday.

Earl Springer, clever southpaw, who allowed the Buckeyes only one run in his three-inning shift, is expected to get the starting nod for the Terps. His catcher will be Bob Burns, strong-armed husky, who has improved tremendously over last year.

May See Action

Joe Crisafull, reserve receiver, and Adam Bengoechea, versatile infielder, are likely to see some action, as are pitchers Charlie Weidinger and Pershing Mondorff, especially if the Terps are able to take a commanding lead.

Should Mondorff be sent to the mound, his sucess will be watched very closely by Coach Burt Shipley, who was disappointed by the burly football star's lack of control. When Mondorff was getting the ball over the plate Ohio State found his offerings rather difficult, except when, as was the usual situation, he was forced to lay the 3-and-2 pitch in the groove.

Mount Washington looms a most formidable opening-match opponent for the Terp lacrossemen. The Baltimore club always has a fast, rugged squad, replete with former collegiate All-Americans.

Terps a Question Mark

On the other hand Maryland, for many years a consistent threat for the national chapionship, is a question mark, due to graduations and lack of replacement material.

Gone from the crack 1938 ten which enjoyed an unusually satisfactory season are Bob Neilson and Parker Lindsay, All-American selections, and Bob Watson, second team All-America, from the attack, and such other star performers as Bill Wolfe and Haskin Deeley, goalie, from the defense.

Maryland's starting aggregation this afternoon probably will be Jack Grier, goal; Leo Mueller, point; Bob Brown, cover point; Milton Mullitz, first defense; Gary Todd, second defense; George Lawrence, center; Jim Meade, second attack; Oscar Nevares, first attack; Fred Hewitt, out home; Jordan Sexton, in home.

Meade, shifting from second defense, and Mullitz and Mueller, are the holdover regulars.

National Capital Shoot Starts Today

Three events, including the .410 gauge championship at 50 birds, will usher in the two-day "Mac Hart" open, registered shoot this afternoon at the National Capital Skeet Club grounds. An attractive program has been arranged by Don Knowlton, chairman, and his committee in charge of arrangements.

Firing will begin at 1 o'clock with the women's scratch and handicap championships, and .410 gauge competition. At 2:30 o'clock a crack field will poke its collective shooting iron at the 20-gauge championship, to be decided at 100 birds.

Tomorrow morning shooting will be resumed in the all-bore, individual and two-man team championships at 9:30 o'clock. Contestants will be divided into four classes to be decided by averages.

Approximately $300 worth of prizes in the guise of radios, shooting glasses and silver trays will be awarded the victors.

Tommy Doonis, a pitcher, and Nick Ludlow, hard-h-itting outfielder, were signed yesterday by the Virginia Red Sox unlimited baseball team. They were asked to repor to the team's first practice tommorrow at 12 o'clock at Bailey's Crossroads. New uniforms will be issued at that time.

Western Beats Central Wins, Swim Crown

Wilson Gains 2d Placé as Mt. Pleasant Team Falls to Third

Western High, with first places in five out of eight events, won the crucial and final match of the inter-high swimming series yesterday at Central High's pool, trimming the defending champion and host team, 35-31.

The loss dropped the Mount Pleasant tankmen to third place in the three-team annual tangle, and won a title for Western that Central has held the past two years in succession. Woodrow Wilson was credited with the runner-up spot in the final standings.

It was the second time this season the swimmers of Western have beaten Central, though the Raiders were given little chance in pre-match reckonings due to the loss of four regulars from the squad.

After the first five events, however, Western had taken four firsts, two seconds and a third to hold a lead that allowed it to coast to victory. Raymond, with triumphs in the 100 and 220-yard free style events, paced the team's early efforts. The match was clinched in the 150-yard medley relay when a team composed of Gray, Dadney and Jenkins, splashed to a fast first in 1:35.

50-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by McKellway (C.); second, Jenkins (W.); third, Keats (C.). Time, 0:28.5.

100-YARD BREAST STROKE—Won by Holden (W.); second, Dadney (W.); third, Walker (C.). Time, 1:15.

220-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Raymond (W.); second, Sanders (C.); third, Crawford (C.). Time, 2:44.

100-YARD BACK STROKE—Won by Gray (W.); second, Bauman (C.); third, Mequam (W.). Time, 1:09.

100-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Raymond (W.); second, Bollan (C.); third, Sperling (C.). Time, 1:04.

FANCY DIVING—Won by Baxter (C.). 61.38 points; second, Holden (W.), 46.52; third, Gaskins (C.), 38.37.

150-YARD MEDLEY RELAY—Won by Western (Gray, Dadney, Jenkins). Time, 1:35.

Four Titles at Stake Tonight In Post-A. A. U. Final Games

St. Martin's Battles Merrick B. C. In 145-Pound Classic at Eastern Gym

Four finals battles, four hard struggles with Washington Post trophies, gold medals and city championships at stake, will mark the closing program tonight in the Post-District A. A. U. tournament at the Eastern High School gymnasium, Eighteenth and East Capitol streets. Climaxing the largest basketball competition ever staged in this city, the 90, 120, 135 and 145-pound finalists will battle it out to a finish.

Despite the importance of the games, the usual nominal fee of 25 cents will be charged.

The feature battle of the night is that of St. Martin's and Merrick Boys Club for the 145-pound crown although the other games will be "do-or-die" affairs of the first water. St. Martin's was stamped as championship timber when it first appeared in the tourney. These boys galloped through Police Boys Club, Takoma Firemen, J. C. C. and St. Mary's to get to the championship bracket.

Merrick was a dark horse from the start. It got by Powell by eight points after downing the E. M. U. Frat team. Then Merrick took a 35-30 lacing at the hands of the Powell Boys Club. After the game it was discovered that Powell had played an ineligible player and the game was forfeited to Merrick.

However, Merrick came back with a vengeance and knocked off Alexandria Boys Club, one of the tourney favorites. A few nights before Alexandria had walloped Columbia Beverage, the defending title-holder, out of the competition.

St. Martin's has an array of 145-pound stars. George Larrick is the ace scorer and one of the highest point-makers of the tournament. He is a dangerous shot from any angle and will be a marked man tonight. Wiles, at the other guard, Jones, at center and McNally and Handley, regular forwards are formidable players. Sonny Thomas proved the man of the hour in the J. C. C. game. With his team on the road to defeat he stepped in and sank two long field goals and a foul shot that spelled victory.

Merrick has Dick Greer and Bob Magee as its standbys. Both are polished players and scoring threats. Loube, Castanquay, Densmore and Loube are the other likely starters.

The 120-pound class final should be a sizzler. The "one-point" Stanton Aces will make their championship bid against the Boys Club Americans.

The Aces, with Friedman, Gill, Capone and the Poston brothers, have won their last two tournament games by a single point. They will be meeting old rivals in the Senators, who also have won hard battles to gain the finals.

It will be Northwest against Northeast in the 90-pound finals. The Washington Boys Club Celtics will tackle the Northeast Boys Club Blackhawks. Both clubs have played brilliant ball. They will play on the main court for the first time. Boys Club followers say it is a toss-up.

Cambridge Crew Opposes Oxford In Ancient Race

Putney, England, March 31 (U.P.).—Tomorrow is boat race day on the old Thames and a million or more persons will see crews of Oxford and Cambridge meet again in the most ancient event in the history of intercollegiate sport.

The boys from Oxford, big, heavy fellows, were 2-1 favorites tonight to sweep to their third successive victory over the 4-mile 374-yard "S-shaped" course that winds downstream past apartments, farms, breweries and meadows.

They started the series in 1829 and, with a few times out for wars and such, they've been at it ever since with the score: Cambridge, 47; Oxford, 42, and one dead heat.

Terry Decides Hubbell Needs Examination

Southpaw Ineffective In Game; Goes to Memphis Sunday

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., March 31.—Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants decided today to ship his southpaw pitching ace, Carl Hubbell, off to Memphis for an examination of his lame shoulder instead of starting him in Sunday's exhibition game.

Hubbell was hit freely during a six-inning practice game today and complained that the lameness in his left shoulder was no better. He said he believed a nerve was affected. He has been taking diathermic treatments for the past three days without showing any benefits.

After surveying the results of today's workout, Terry said he would send Hubbell to Memphis Sunday night for an examination by Dr. J. Spencer Speed, the surgeon who extracted some bone chips from Hub's elbow last August. The elbow hasn't given Hubbell any trouble, but he apparently has hurt his shoulder while favoring the elbow in training.

Mound Staff Will Decide Fate of Tech

Coach Kessler, However, Appears Optimistic Over Team's Chances

(This is the third of a series of articles discussing each of the seven high school baseball teams which start the annual interhigh series on April 21.)

By Bill Burnett.

No one can work up more enthusiasm, real or false, over the coming baseball season than Coach Bruce Kessler, who has charge of McKinley's series threat. Yet the little Tech guide utters the universal plaint of baseball managers when he's pinned down to the actual number of games his team will win and lose.

"Who can tell?" he asks hopefully, kicking a roll of turf recently sliced from the football field to turn it into a diamond. "If we get the pitching ——! You know how it is."

No, how is it, Mr. Kessler?

"Well, high school players being as they are—unsteady, and all—it only takes a good start and fair throwing from then on to keep the boys fighting. But if a bad day crops up, and somebody gets nipped for a string of runs in one inning, everybody lets down. We might as well close shop and go home if that happens to us."

Wine Is Mainstay

The toast of Tech's pitching corps will be, as it was last season, young Dick Wine, a right-hander. He was responsible for several of the Maroon's victories and he'll carry the burden of the mound work.

Heinie Webb, who used to weigh close to 300 pounds but came down to a shadowy 250 during basketball season, is out again after a year's layoff, and may be Wine's alternate. The only port-sider with enough promise on the squad at present is Al Jones, a transfer from Eastern. Baba Wiles failed to earn a letter last season, but was credited with a surprise winning performance against a strong Washington-Lee High team.

Coach Kessler views with considerable alarm the change in the competitive plan this year, whereby the seven schools are divided into eastern and western divisions.

Add More Pressure

"I think it puts more pressure on the teams in our league, the Eastern,' he says, "because we have only four games to play. Another thing, it'll probably hurt the attendance at our outside games. The whole thing seems to build up to one game, the eastern and western championship, too much."

With it all, Tech's chances seem particularly good this year. It split even in the 1938 series, winning three and losing three. Another record of three victories, this time out of four games, should put it on top of its division.

For the third year, red-headed Charley Kendall will hold down the first base job, meanwhile chipping in with his share of the extra base hits. He was the slugger of last year's crew, along with Lou Mostow, an outfielder. Chester Ciomei, All-High second baseman, will return to his old position, and there are at least two likely prospects for every other position.

The first scheduled action will be against Montgomery Blair high on April 24, by which time McKinley will have one of the best diamonds of the city ready.

April 24, Montgomery-Blair; 26, G. W. Frosh; 28, Anacostia (Interhigh); May 2, Episcopal; 5, Eastern (Interhigh); 9, at Anacostia (Interhigh); 11, Bladensburg, 13, at Loyola; 17, at Episcopal; 19, at Eastern (Interhigh); 30, at G. U. Frosh; June 2, at Washington-Lee.

Mrs. Page Plays Dot Kirby

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 31.—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, buxom Chapel Hill (N. C.) housewife, and young Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga., whose qualifying scores were only one stroke apart, will play tomorrow for the championship in the North and South Women's Golf Tournament.

Mrs. Page went into the finals today by eliminating Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., 6 and 2. Miss Kirby defeated Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., 7 and 6.

Mrs. Page, former national women's titlist, won the qualifying medal with a 74 and Miss Kirby, a former Southern champion, carded a 75. They had 35's today at the turn.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

Back on the Beat

New York, March 31.—I suppose, no matter where you are, you always have the feeling that you're missing a great deal that's going on somewhere else. I couldn't wait to get to Florida last month, for it seemed all the action on the sports pages was crowded into the southland. Yet after being absent from my usual haunts for a month there was the same urge to return to the bright lights of Broadway and the playing fields of Manhattan.

VIDMER

The parade, it seemed, was passing me by. Things were happening of which I knew little or nothing. Events were taking place about which people would be talking in excited tones and I wouldn't be able to speak their language. So, returning, I started checking up.

"What's new? What's been going on around here?"

I started my investigations immediately and the check up reveals:

There have been a couple of fights. Tony Canzoneri, the old warrior, got licked by somebody named Eddie Brink. I'm glad I didn't see that. I don't know this fellow Brink, but there always has been a soft spot in my heart for Tony and I don't think it would have been pleasant seeing a game guy and a once great fighter slipping so far into the shadows that he could be conquered by a comparative unknown.

Pedro Montanez beat somebody and Jackie (Kid) Berg beat somebody else. Neither fight could have been so hot and as far as the business of boxing is concerned it seemed that I didn't miss much. As long as I returned in time to see Henry Armstrong go into action last night it seems I have no cause for regrets in that direction.

Couple of Track Meets

Then of course there was the national inter-collegiate indoor track and field championships. And the special two mile race between Cunningham and Lash must have been exciting to see. I went away thinking that the Indiana Flyer would beat Cunningham at that distance, but came back to find that I was wrong, which is not unique in the annals of sports.

They tell me that there was a badminton tournament while I was away, but I don't thing the fact that I missed that is going to cause any loss of sleep.

Wayne Sabin won the indoor tennis championship, but that wasn't any surprise. I suggested that he might be the outstanding American amateur this season long before the campaign started.

There was some other tennis during my absence. Don Budge, having established his superiority over Ellsworth Vines, came back to Madison Square Garden to meet Fred Perry and gave him a fine beating in straight sets. I hear that Budge put on a masterful exhibiton that night, but no one could have been very much surprised at the result.

Hockey Now at Peak

Of course, they finished the hockey season, but they are only in the final stages of the play-offs now and the real hockey hysteria is going on. I can't say I missed anything to regret in that field.

Anything else? Well, the Stork Club and "21" are still doing business as usual. I hear a new night spot called Monte Carlo has caught the fancy of the boys and girls who join the parade when night falls. Mike Jacobs is still smiling around the Hippodrome. The Yankee Stadium, the Polo Grounds and Ebbets Field are right where they used to be. And I'm bgeinning to wonder whatever was the great rush to get back, anyway. Maybe I should have lingered longer in Miami.

As Bob Service once wrote:

I think of the things I miss:
The boys I used to know;
The girls I used to kiss;
The coin I used to blow;
The bars I use' to haunt;
The racket and the row;
The drinks I didn't want—
I wish I had 'em now!

Triple-Header At Heurich Gym

A basketball triple-header, featuring the Rho Fraternity champions against the O. V. Catto Elks of Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Tribune national girls' champions against the Lincolnettes, and the Alpha Phi Alpha against the Omega Psi Phi, will be staged tonight by Morning Star Lodge of colored Elks at the Heurich gymnasium.

The Rho group, principally Miner Teachers' College players, conquered all colored fraternities in the playoff here, and are calculated to give the Philadelphians formidable opposition. The Tribune girls will feature Ora Washington, holder of tennis and other championships, at center. The Alphas and Omegas will settle an ancient rivalry.

Hungarians Down U. S. in Table Tennis

Schiff and Bellis Bow in Matches at Local Gymnasium

Hungary, represented by two squat gentlemen in slacks, invaded the United States last night and "took" two of the best table tennis players this country could offer.

Laszlo Bellak and Tibor Hazi whipped Sol Schiff and Isadore Bellis in a series of international miniature tennis matches at Heurich gym, three matches to two, before an appreciative audience of almost 1,000 persons.

The triumph of the Europeans came after the United States duo had amassed a 2-1 lead in matches. Schiff, ranked No. 5 this year in the U. S. T. T. A. ratings, started proceedings with a straight-game victory over Hazi, and then doubled up with Bellis to trounce the Hungarian pair in a hard-fought doubles match, 21—13, 17—21 and 21—18. Bellak gave Hungary its first victory when he tripped Bellis in consecutive games, 21—13, 21—18.

Hungarians Bear Down

After a brief intermission the firing began again, and it was all Hungary from there in. The nonchalant Bellak, pulling every trick in the book, set Schiff back on his heels, 21—19 and 21—17, and the score was tied at 2-all. The issue depended solely on the outcome of the singles between Bellis and Hazi.

From the outcome of the first game between the pair, it was almost certain that Bellis, University of Pennsylvania student and former junior United States tennis champ, would bring the honors to this country. After trailing, 1-4 and 3-7, he began whipping the ball over the net with a vicious forehand to take the game 21-16.

Hazi, whose vocabulary includes not a word of English, stolidly hung on in the second game, forged ahead after Bellis led 13-12 at the change of serves, and won by a 21-19 count. It was the same story all over again in the third game. Behind 4-11, the perpetually-blushing Hazi found himself suddenly and brought the score to 13-12. From there on he volleyed Bellis into submission and finally won, 21-18.

Fonda Earns Applause

It was Bellis, a handsome lad with a Fonda profile, who won the greatest applause of the audience. He worked earnestly but for the most part against better players. The trick shots and congeniality of Bellak kept spectators laughing throughout the matches.

Though Senator Rush Holt, of West Virginia, was unable to toss out the first celluloid as planned, Sandor Glancz, another outstanding Hungarian star, arrived on schedule and gave a one-game exhibition with Bellak. The latter won 21-18.

The Brighter Side...

By Damon Runyon

RUNYON

Our favorite fodder is the potato, one of God's greatest gifts to man. We say man, because the potato is definitely not a gift to woman. It makes her fat.

We consider the discovery of this fact—that the potato makes women fat—one of the most important in history. It lessens the possibility of the potato supply of the world being utterly consumed in our time. We used to worry about that when the ladies were eating potatoes freely.

If it came to a pinch, we think we could subsist solely on potatoes cooked the right way. We are mainly a fried potato man, though we also like them baked, or roasted, or even boiled, though then we want them cold. Mashed, no. Souffled, no. Creamed, no. Au gratin, seldom. We think if you monkey around too much with a potato it takes a lot of biff out of it. A mashed potato, for instance, has no personality, unless you make patties of it and fry it.

Give us that lyonnaise, which fried potato, which is sliced raw potato fried in a skillet. Give us that hashed brown, or any of the various forms of the so-called French fried potato, provided it is fresh fried. There is nothing more anemic than an elderly French fried potato.

Give us that Lyonnaise, which is with onions, or the potato O'Brien, cut into little cubes and fried with pimiento. Give us potato soup, or potato pancakes. Give us potatoes almost any way, except in mushy messes, and we will let the calories fall where they may.

Several Kinds

Then there is Dinty Moore's "Tenth Avenue" potato, which is sliced boiled potato fried in butter, and is something like German fried, only better. The only trouble is that during the rush hours in Dinty's, you have to be on excellent terms with the boss, or perhaps hold a letter of introduction from some good looking dame to the boss' son, Willie, to get those "Tenth Avenues."

The No. 1 potato in our book is the Irish potato, of course, but if you can find a cook who knows how to roast or bake a sweet potato you have got something. We

Bank Deposits Here Set New High Record

$341,802,292 Total For 22 Active Local Banks on March 29

A call issued yesterday by the Comptroller of the Currency for the condition of all banks in the District and of all national banks in the United States, revealed that deposits in the 22 active Washington banks on March 29 were $341,802,292.88, the highest total ever reported.

The former peak in bank deposits here was reported following the call three months ago, the total on December 31, 1938, standing at $341,522,766.74, which places the present gain at $279,526.14.

Sixteen of the banks reported today that their deposits were higher than on the December call and the other six noted decreases. Although the aggrgeate increase is comparatively small, it is sufficient to hang up a new record.

A similar call was issued by the Federal Reserve Board to the state banks belonging to its system. Altogether, 5,220 National and 1,113 State banks were asked to report. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which sometimes issues simultaneous calls to insured State banks not belonging to the Federal Reserve, did not participate in yesterday's call.

Deposits of the local institutions on March 29 were as follows:

Pittsburgh Steel Co. Seeks Wage Reduction

Monessen, Pa., March 31 (AP).—Union and company officials said today a wage reduction has been sought at the Pittsburgh Steel Co.'s plant here but differed on the extent of the adjustments. The $41,000,000 company, employing 6,000 workers in its Monessen and Allenport, Pa., plants, is believed to be the first steel firm manufacturing its own raw steel to seek reductions under its C. I. O. steel workers' union contract.

Several smaller companies have obtained wage concessions, in one case reported to be as much as 25 per cent. Some observers regarded the company's action as a possible opening wedge for a general wage slash throughout the steel industry.

Stock Seats Sell At Year's Lows

New York, March 31 (AP).—Two memberships in the New York Stock Exchange sold today, each successively at a record low price for the year.

A morning transfer was made at $38,000, a drop of $2,000 from the previous transaction, while a later sale was effected at $56,000. High price of the year was touched March 8 at $70,000.

Living Cost Cut By Lower Food, Clothing, Rents

New York, March 31.—The cost of living of wage earners in the United States declined 0.4 per cent from January to February, chiefly because of decreases in the cost of food and clothing, according to the regular monthly survey of the Industrial Conference Board. Living costs in February, 1939, were 1.8 per cent lower than a year ago, and 14.6 per cent lower than in February, 1938, but 18.7 per cent higher than at the low point of 1933.

Food price declined 1.0 per cent from January to February, bringing them to a level 2.1 per cent below that of February, 1938, 25.0 per cent below that of February, 1929, but 28.3 per cent higher than at the low point of 1933.

Rents declined only 0.1 per cent in the month interval. They were 1.9 per cent lower than in February, 1938, 6.3 per cent lower than in February, 1929, but 37.3 per cent higher than at the beginning of 1934, their low point.

Clothing prices in February were 0.4 per cent lower than in January, 4.7 per cent lower than in February, 1938, 27.6 per cent lower than in February, 1929, but 19.3 per cent higher than at the low of 1933.

Coal prices did not change in the month interval. They were 0.6 per cent lower than in February, 1938, and 8.2 per lower than 10 years ago.

$1,994,861 Loss By Alleghany

Cleveland, March 31 (AP).—Alleghany Corporation, nominally top holding company of the former Van Sweringen Railroad System, reported today a loss of $1,994,861 for 1938, compared with $9,780,560 profit the preceding year.

Alleghany's 1938 total income was $2,428,129, against $13,953,006 in 1937, when the company received a dividend of 255,600 shares of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway common on its holding of 1,278,000 C. & O. common. The stock dividend was carried at $9,776,700.

In 1938, the company also took a loss of $29,612,125 on its sale of Erie Railroad and Nickel Plate shares to the C. & O. under an option exercised last January 29. This was not included in the consolidated income account, but was carried separately in its earned surplus-deficit account.

President George A. Tomlinson's report showed Alleghany during 1938 purchased and canceled $1,341,000 of its 1950 bonds, leaving $23,046,000 of the issue outstanding.

Auto Production Lower for Week

Detroit, March 31 (AP).—Ward's reports said today that automobile and truck production during the current week dropped to 85,890 units as compared with 89,400 last week.

The decrease was attributed to manufacturers balancing their schedules against orders and field stocks, a usual practice in the final week of the month. Unseasonable weather was cited as a restricting factor in the sales lelds. The same week last year saw a production of 57,500 units.

Bucketeer Gets Two Years in Prison

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that J. B. Parkinson, of Dallas, Tex., was sentenced by Federal Judge T. M. Kennerly in United States District Court at Houston to serve two years in the Southwestern Reformatory at El Reno, Okla., for operating a "bucket shop" in violation of the fraud provisions of the securities act of 1933.

Parkinson pleaded guilty to all ten counts of the indictment. During the course of the scheme Parkinson's shortages ran between $50,000 and $350,000.

New York, March 31 (AP).—This week's offerings of securities totaled $86,176,260, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today. Of this amount, 11 per cent represented "new money."

Cotton Higher; May 8.08 Cents

New York, March 31 (AP).—A cotton market dominated most of the day by legislative uncertainties at Washington was given a last-minute buying lift today. Rising 5 to 10 points above the day's lows, final net gains of 1 to 4 points were established. Closing demand represented buying by New Orleans interests and covering by the trade. Morning setbacks had followed lower Liverpool cables, fairly active selling by Bombay brokers and general foreign liquidation.

Heavy Liquidation Sets New 1939 Lows
Politics and War Fears Are Factors
Utilities, Stores, Foods Are Resistant

New York, March 31.—The first quarter of 1938 for which high hopes of recovery had been held, ended inglorioously today with security prices dropping to new 1939 lows on heavy liquidation. Selling, according to informed quarters, originated locally with little foreign participation, and was based as much on disappointment over the national political and business situations as on fears of war in Europe. Rumors that some of the large investment trusts had been sellers; adverse reports from automotive and steel; a disciplinary development involving one of the large wire houses, and inadequacy of buying to absorb the flood of offerings, were factors in slump of quotations.

New 1939 lows were established by all groups in the 100-stock average with the exception of utilities, stores and foods. Chief sufferers being the rail equipments, coppers, motors and blue chip manufacturing issues. Over the whole list, however, and irrespective of activity, individual losses ranged from 1 to 6 points, with closing prices at or close to the lows for the session. The composite for the 100 stocks was off 2.01 points, the widest break since the bear session of January 23, when previous 1939 lows had been established.

Trading Is Active

Sales of 2,888,390 shares on the big board were the largest total since November 9, 1938, the day after the election, when markets had advanced sharply. The 997 issues traded represented the broadest trading since December 28 last.

Stocks opened higher on a small amount of overnight buying attracted by Thursday's markdowns. Prices backed and filled until noon when the first of the three selling waves responsible for the break was launched. The second came at around 2 o'clock and lasted for an hour, and the final demonstration, developing within 15 minutes proved the severest of the lot, causing last-hour volume to approximate 800,000 shares. During this period and for a few minutes at a time in the earlier selling, tickers were frequently two to four minutes behind the market.

General Motors was the most active stock, losing 2⅛ on sales of 67,500 shares. Steel common went below 50, but closed at that figure for a net loss of 2¼, Bethlehem losing 2¾. Johns-Manville, the farm implement issues, American Brake Shoe and a long list of senior stocks were among the weakest. Of 892 individual issues to decline no less than 603 were at new lows for the year or longer.

Bonds Register New Lows

Listed bonds today showed themselves almost as vulnerable as equities to a selling wave that could not be considered heavy by old standards, but that serves to depress prices sharply in these days of New Deal markets. In a turnover of $10,300,000, which amounts to a normal day's business, levels tumbled and scores of lows for the year were registered. Best grade investment issues did not wilt much, but speculative and foreign bonds dipped heavily. Declines ranged to 5 points in ordinarily active corporation bonds, and foreign obligations were almost equally soft.

Although it was the foreign situation that appeared to set the market more firmly on the downward course, most interest was taken in domestic issues and their variations. Secondary rail liens were marked progressively lower as the day wore one, and sizable losses appeared in New York Central, Southern Pacific and Nickel Plate issues, and others of the same classification. Holding company bonds and industrial convertibles tumbled, along with their related equities. Local tractions, communications issues and others far removed from the European scene joined the parade.

In the foreign section Polish obligations were dull, at recessions of a point or two. German issues were neglected, while the British empire issues of Australian and Canadian origin dipped fractionally. Scandinavians suffered another setback, and Belgians also were lower. The Italian group was heavy, and Japanese bonds also were sold. Latin American bonds moved lower in line with the general trend.

United States Treasury obligations were a little easier, but institutional buyers quickly took them up on any recessions. A few of the longer term issues fell 6/32 to 15/32 point, but intermediate and short dated bonds fell less than these figures. Guaranteed bonds were soft. Only smallest fractional losses appeared in best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds.

Washington Leads Fifth District in Building Volume

Richmond, Va., March 31 (AP).—The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today that February trade in the Fifth District was up to seasonal levels and materially exceeded that of February, 1938, in all lines except retail trade in department and general stores.

Building permits issued in 31 cities of the district in February totaled $7,216,892 as compared with $7,218,914 in the same period last year. Washington led in estimated valuation figures with $3,227,041, followed by Charleston, S. C., with $849,292, Baltimore with $845,492, Richmond with $452,633, and Durham with $342,060. Of the seven largest cities higher valuation figures were reported for Washington, Richmond, Norfolk and Winston-Salem.

D. C. Store Sales Hold Up

"Retail sales were in fact somewhat better this year in smaller cities and towns, but lower sales in all of the larger cities except Washington pulled the district average below the 1938 level," the bank said.

Wholesale trade in 206 firms, representing more than a dozen lines, was 3 per cent above the February 1938 volume of business and retail furniture sales were larger than a year ago in all States of the district except Maryland.

New passenger automobile sales in the Fifth District in February dropped 7 per cent from the January sales, which the bank said was a seasonal decrease due to the shorter month, and increased 51 per cent over the February sales a year ago.

U. S. Investment In Life Insurance Highest in History

Louisville, Ky., March 31.—The American public today is investing more dollars in life insurance than ever before in the history of the United States—or, for that matter, in any country, Holgar J. Johnson, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, told the National Council at its mid-year meeting here today. "I wonder if the 64,000,000 persons who own life insurance—and we who serve those policyowners—grasp the full significance of that statement," Mr. Johnson said. "In a time when the entire world is upset and so many of our institutions are being questioned, it is significant that the American public continues to turn confidently to life insurance as one of the surest means of providing for the future.

"Here is the record for all legal reserve life insurance companies in the United States. In 1929, policy owners and purchasers of annuity contracts paid premiums of $3,350,000,000. In 1938 they paid approximately $3,770,000,000 in such premiums. This increase, by the way, is much greater than appears from the figures. National income today is less than it was in 1929, yet out of today's smaller national income more actual dollars are being invested in life insurance than in 1929."

N.Y. Exchange Suspends Two In Trust Deals

Paine and Hope Out; 5 Are Indicted For Mail Fraud

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 31.—The New York Stock Exchange announced tonight the suspension of Stephen Paine for three years and Frank R. Hope for six months.

Both men are partners of the big stock exchange firm of Paine, Webber & Co., which has offices in 19 cities.

Hope is a member of the exchange. Paine is amenable to the exchange's disciplinary action under a recent rule classing all partners in stock exchange firms as "allied members."

The suspensions were based on charges the two men did not exercise diligence in certain transactions involving the control of investment trusts.

No allegations involving dishonesty were made against either individual or the firm.

Meanwhile, five individuals and a Canadian holding company they created—Northern Fiscal Corporation, Ltd.—were indicted today for mail fraud and conspiracy in a scheme by which the Government claims $1,425,000 was abstracted from three investment trusts they acquired.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 31 (AP).—Max Macon and Max Lanier, St. Louis Cardinal castoffs, were good enough today to help hurl the Columbus Redbirds to a 3-ot-2 triumph over their 1938 teammates.

The two former Cards, along with Al Fisher, held the major leaguers to six scattered hits in an exhibition game, and didn't allow Joe Medwick or Johnny Mize, St. Louis' one-two punch, a single safety. Another former Cardinal, Herb Bremer, who was sent to Columbus a few days ago, caught the entire game.

Reds Beat Dodgers In Extra Innings

Tampa, Fla., March 31 (AP).—A six-hit, six-run splurge in the fourth by Brooklyn went for naught today as the Reds went into extra innings to win a free-hitting, error-shot contest, 8 to 7.

Dolph Camilli's second-inning freak homer, one that bounded out of the playing field, started the scoring, the Dodger six-run attack sending Hurler Earl Cook to the showers, and Jimmy Wilson's seventh-inning homer tied up the game until Bill Werber clouted another in the tenth to score Billy Myers with the winning run.

Seven players equalled par figures of 72, including Ralph Guldahl, of Madison, N. J., whose incoming 34 was the second best exhibition on the incoming journey. Armour, after a mediocre outgoing 8, settled down to a nifty 33 on the second nine.

Bob Estalella Weak Hitting Curve Balls

Nats

the Nats five outfielders that can compare with Bobby's.

"It may work out all right," added Harris. "I remember when Goose Goslin couldn't hit a slow curve either. Pitchers would throw him that slow stuff and then laugh at him. He rarely saw a fast ball. But he saw so many curves that after awhile he learned how to hit a hook and he'd murder curve-ball pitching as well as fast stuff."

Harris has a simple explanation for the Nats' three defeats in their last four exhibition games. "I'm not complaining about our pitching. It hasn't been half bad. But take two fellows like Cecil Travis and Taft Wright out of your batting order and it will hurt any club. With those two fellows in good health we might have won every game we played."

The outfield picture on the Nats is not yet clearly defined. Harris has tentatively assigned the jobs to Estalella, Wright and Case, but only the Cuban appears to be a fixture. Wright, who hit .350 last season must continue to pound the ball to offset his fielding deficiencies, and Case in centerfield is valuable chiefly for his knack of getting on base. He's still uncertain in his judgment of fly balls.

There is a distinct possibility that the veteran, Sammy West, will break into the Nats' outfield by the time the season opens. A superior fielder, West has always been a consistent hitter in the early months of the season and Harris may feel constrained to go along with this veteran in preference to Wright or Case. Not counted out as yet, also, is Johnny Welaj, the fleet-footed lad from Trenton whose fly-chasing is a potent recommendation. Welaj has shown signs of hitting talent, too.

Notes of the Nats

Rain doused the orange belt today, washing out the Nats' scheduled game with the Tigers at Lakeland. . . . Whereupon Harris chaperoned his club into Bradenton for tomorrow's battle with the Boston Bees. . . . Against the Bees, the Nats will meet up with their old pal, Al Simmons, whose hitting is supposed to lift his new club into the first division this year . . . which was what they said about Al when he joined the Nats. . . . Joe Krakauskas and Walter Masterson, who were to have pitched against the Tigers today, will take the mound tomorrow against Boston. . . . Bucky Harris said the Nats would put in a claim for Cletus Poffenberger, eccentric Detroit righthander, if the Tigers asked waivers on him. . . . Well, the Tigers asked waivers and sent Poffenberger to Beaumont today. . . . Clark Griffith didn't want him at the $7,500 waiver price. . . . Barring another relapse, Cecil Travis, ill in an Orlando hospital, will be in the Nats' line-up on opening day. . . . Jake Early's catching and slugging have virtually won him the job of the Nats' No. 2 catching, superseding Angelo Giuliani . . . The most disappointing note in the Nats' camp is Jimmy Masdell's failure to kool impressive at bat.

ington Boys Clubs Senators nosed out Alexandria Boys Club, 24-23.

The Senators led from the start until the end of the third period when the game Virginia quintet rallied to knot the score at 20-all. It appeared that Alexandria might go on from there to down the District team, but the Senators had a finishing punch to carry them through.

Billy Skags and McDonald Payne were outstanding for the victors, while Dombrowsky did yeoman duty for Alexandria.

N.E. Flashes Defeat Eckington Five, 32-20

Rolling up a 12-to-8 lead in the first half and adding it to this margin at a steady gait throughout the second, Northeast Flashes romped over Eckington Bakery, 32 to 20, to gain the final round in the 135-pound division.

The Bakers wilted badly after play was resumed in the final half, and, with Armad DeBethizy, Ray Collie and Joe McKenna showing the way, the Flashes quickly pulled away. Collie's shooting was spectacular, as he located the hoop from all angles. Harold Katz played a steady game for Eckington, but his efforts were not enough to stem the tide.

are violently opposed to the system of cooking sweet potatoes, or even yams, with sugar or molasses and are a trifle suspicious of anyone who does that to a sweet potato, or makes pies of it.

It is our belief that nature intended the sweet potato to be baked or roasted or occasionally fried, but never to be fixed up with marshmallows and things like that, though we will not debate the point. The sweet potato is not important enough in your life to bother fighting about it.

We recently came upon a brand new way of cooking white potatoes. You boil them in resin—the same kind of resin that violinists rub on their bow strings and also the very same kind of resin that prize fighters shuffle the soles of their shoes in, so they will not fall over until they get hit on the chin, or their manager gives the word.

This resin is chucked into an iron pot, preferably over a fire out in the open, though that makes no difference. When the resin is boiling, you drop the potatoes in whole and with the jackets on and let them boil about the same length of time as you would if they were boiling in water. It depends on how well done you like your potatoes.

When you dip the spuds out of the resin with a ladle and wrap each one separately in a piece of newspaper, or even a fancier grade if you prefer, though we favor the newspaper because we want to help the newsprint manufacturers out all we can. In that form the potato goes to the table. You split the potato, cutting through paper and all, and there you have as tasty a Murphy as you ever slapped a lip over. They will keep hot while wrapped for hours.

Some fellows like to eat their potatoes right out of the shell though personally we prefer digging the meat out on the plate and then sloshing it with plenty of butter and that blackish hickory cured salt that comes from Philadelphia. The meat of the resin boiled potato is white and flaky like that of a baked potato, but has a different taste—sort of piney woods flavor. The effect of the resin-boiling is to dehydrate the potato, which is to say, remove all the moisture.

When we say this is a new way of cooking potatoes, we mean it is new to us, though it seems to be well known among the folks down in Dade County, Fla. That is where we first witnessed the resinous rites. The Dade County folks love to introduce their Yankee friends to the ceremony. A. Frank Katzentine, a distinguished Dade County lawyer and owner of a radio station on Miami Beach, of which he used to be mayor, first let us in on the thing.

A chap named Mark Phillips, who has been called "the Cellini of the South," because of his artistry in metal work, has a unique place south of Miami where he produces the resin boiled potato. Phillips does not claim to have invented the method. He saw it done somewhere else and tried it out himself and now a visitor to Dade County who has not been presented to the resin boiled potato is plumb out of luck, especially if he is a strong potato fellow like we are.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

Air Travel Allowed

PRESIDENT Roosevelt, by amendment to the travel regulations, gives a lift to commercial air lines and speeds up the movement of Federal employes flitting about on official business. This was by authorizing air travel after approval has been obtained from department heads. Last year—for economy reasons—the President tried to keep all air travel at a minimum and officials scanned the travel reports, figuratively insisting on the use of the horse and buggy. But, realistically, the speed won't interest the employes so much as, well, the fact of a plane trip.

To Robert G. Blake, Fredericksburg, Va.: In reply to your letter, the way to find out about the junior meteorological examinations offered by the Civil Service Commission is to write the Commission's Application Division for an application. And it might be said that many, possibly thousands, of persons will do that. This is more than likely in this particular case, because the examination is open to persons from 18 years old up and a legion of boys that age are looking for jobs. Whoever gets it will be lucky, because the Weather Bureau is a swell place in which to work.

WATCH that Social Security Board angle in the "favoritism" hearings being held by Senator Ellender. It is to be bitter, before done. It will have no sex appeal, but what they're after is to drag official personalities into the light and prove, if possible, that the S. S. B. has no merit system; that it leans to the viewpoint that an "expert system" is better than a merit system and that they fire unwanted people there by dissolving jobs from under them. The opening of these cases on Thursday disclosed nothing of the good nature that made the other hearings by Ellender so delightful. Rather, the Social Security Board cases were like guns, loaded with nailheads.

AND otherwise, Ellender is the only man we've known who could humanize that terribly humdrum Civil Service topic. Above all things, Ellender is a showman; could probably make more money in that profession than he does in the Senate. He is a master at repartee, is a sentimentalist and is sincere. He has a feeling for the underdog that seems very real. These qualities made him what he is down yonder where he came from.

A PHYSICAL examination will be required of employes whose positions are being brought into classified service by the June 24 Executive orders. The Civil Service Commission's medical examining staff will fix the standards on these three basic considerations: 1. Is the applicant physically capable, on the entrance date, of performing the duties of the position; 2. Is the physical stamina of the applicant such that he will not be a compensation hazard . . ., and is the health of the applicant, at the present time, such that he will not constitute a retirement hazard.

A criticism of this comes from E. Claude Babcock, president of the Federal Personnel Association. He says: "The Federal Personnel Association does not agree that employes who have established civil service status, either for reinstatement or transfer, should be held up to that high degree of physical ability which may well be required of persons taking original entrance examinations. The Federal Personnel Association believes that persons who have used up a part of their physical ability in the service . . . should not be held up in employment because of the deficiencies caused by such service."

NOTES: The Florida State Society dances tonight at the Raleigh Hotel . . . The All-State Glee Club has joined with the Union Playhouse Chorus. Lee Shugar writes . . . A total of $6,600 has been recommended for one-step increases for the most deserving Immigration Field Service employes getting less than $2,000. The recommendation was made by the subcommittee on appropriations and chiefly the raises would go to married men with families. The greatest need for this is in New York . . . On the subject of Senator Ellender, his plan is to get at least one case from as many departments and agencies as possible so that the record of his hearing will give a bird's-eye view of the field. And in some instances, the bird got an eyeful!

Bob Burns Says—

I heard a lecture the other night, and a fella gave a wonderful talk. He said that the men who reached the height of success are those who look ahead and prepare themselves for the future. You know, the more I think about that speech the more I believe that fella is right. Why, I wouldn't be a bit surprised if that ain't the reason my Uncle J. Pierpont Hink is so well off today.

Now there was a man who was always plannin' to make the road ahead easier for himself, and now that he's got all he wants he's doin' the same thing for his son, J. Pierpont Hink, jr. The other day he says, "J. P." (he wanted to make the boy feel like a man), he says, "There's a button off your coat, and I want ya to sew it on."

J. P., Jr., says, "Oh, pater, mater'll fix that."

And my Uncle Hink says, "No, sir, I want you to learn to sew buttons on yourself. You're with your maw now—but some day you'll have a wife."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Whether or not the bridge players' mathematics are sound in bidding even Mr. Winslow will admit that their counting at play has been developed to the point of deadly accuracy.

The value of counting—that is, determining the hand patterns of the adversaries—is limitless. Moreover it is no mysterious ritual known only to the experts. Counting can be achieved by any one. To be sure, it requires the ability to remember the bidding and make deductions from it and the patience to remember the cards and count them as they are played, but the mental processes involved are simple. While the drudgery and slowness at first are boresome the new vistas of play that the accomplishment brings are more than worth the work.

Today's hand shows the practical application of counting and how it revealed the location of a missing queen.

Declarer, because he was able to determine the hand pattern of one of the adversaries, learned that that player had but one low card in the vital suit and therefore the partner held the missing queen. Thus, instead of his play being a 50-50 proposition it was 100 per cent successful. Here is how he did it:

West opened the nine of clubs; East took the king and played the ace then the jack which West trumped. West led a heart and declarer took with the king in his own hand, then ran off four spade tricks to exhaust East. He played a heart to the ace in dummy and returned dummy's last heart ruffing in his own hand. This last would seem on the surface a wasted move, but it was the means by which declarer made certain of East's holdings.

Declarer knew that East originally had nine black cards, four red. The play of the club and spade suit revealed this. But he wished to make sure of how many cards East held in the diamond suit. When East followed on the third heart he was almost sure that East held a singleton diamond. To prove this assumption and also prevent losing to a singleton queen he laid down his diamond ace. When East followed his conclusions were proved correct. On the next play declarer finessed West for the diamond queen and his contract was made.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Clever Mrs. Harrier

There was a lot of coming and going and fussing about at the nest of Harrier and Mrs. Harrier, the Marsh Hawks. It was on the Green Meadows not far from the dear Old Briar-patch where Peter Rabbit and Mrs. Peter have lived so long. Peeping out from under the brambles they had watched the building of that nest. Later they had known by the signs when there were eggs in that nest, and now they knew by the signs that those eggs had begun to hatch. There was an air of excitement around that nest that couldn't be mistaken.

"It's going to be a dangerous time for small people around here from now on," declared Peter gloomily.

"It has been a dangerous time ever since those Hawks came back from the sunny South this spring," said Mrs. Peter.

"True, but now it will be worse," replied Peter. "It is going to take a lot of food to supply those growing children, and that means a lot of trouble for a lot of people. You better keep the children in the Briar-patch."

There were six eggs in that nest. As yet but two had hatched. It was likely to be several days between the hatching of the first one and the hatching of the last one. You see they have been laid several days apart but Mrs. Harrier had begun sitting on the first almost as soon as laid. Now there were two babies and four eggs. Those eggs must still be kept warm. It wouldn't do at all to allow them to become chilled. Yet there were two babies to be fed.

"My dear, you stay right on those eggs and I'll find the food," said Harrier, and away he flew over toward the Smiling Pool. Peter and Mrs. Peter watched him go and were glad that he hadn't come to hunt along the edge of the dear old Briar-patch. Mrs. Harrier remained sitting on the nest.

Harrier was gone quite a while. Peter had forgotten him for the time being. The fact is Peter was dozing. He had been out all the night before and now he was sleepy. A shrill cry from overhead caused his eyes to fly open. Again that shrill cry. Looking up he say Harrier flying rather high. It was he who was calling. He was carrying something in his claws.

Mrs. Peter had heard that cry too. Now she joined Peter and together they crept to the edge of the Briar-patch and looked over toward the nest of the Harriers.

"Probably he is bringing something home. I wonder if he will give it to Mrs. Harrier on the nest," said Mrs. Peter.

Mrs. Harrier answered that question by leaving the nest and taking to her wings. She was answering Harrier who was circling high above. She began to rise toward him. "She is going to meet him," said Peter.

Just then Harrier, who was directly over Mrs. Harrier and still considerably above her, let go of what he was carrying. It was a frog. Down fell the frog. Then Mrs. Harrier did a clever thing. Peter said afterward if he hadn't have seen her do it he wouldn't have believed that she could do it. At just the right instant she turned part way over up there in the air, struck like a flash with her claws, and picked that Frog right out of the air. A second or two later she was gliding down to the nest with that frog securely clutched in her claws.

"Did you ever!" exclaimed Mrs. Peter.

"No, I never did," declared Peter.

"Mrs. Harrier is clever, isn't she?" said Mrs. Peter in an admiring tone.

"She's too clever it you ask me," replied Peter.

"Do you suppose he dropped that accidentally or on purpose?" asked Mrs. Peter.

Peter didn't know then. But later they saw the same trick performed and then they knew it was intentional. Harrier was saving time. Once Mrs. Harrier missed it. In a flash she was diving after the prize and caught it before it hit the ground. Mrs. Peter was right when she said that Mrs. Harrier was clever. She was indeed.

2 Latin Envoys Seal Doors of Spain Embassy

Mexican and Colombian Officials Take Charge; De Los Rios Goes to N.Y.

With this terse announcement switchboard operators last night signalled the collapse of Republican Spain's Washington front.

A few hours earlier Dr. Fernando de los Rios, envoy of the shattered regime, had turned over the keys of the palatial Spanish Embassy at Sixteenth and Fuller streets northwest to Colombian Ambassador Lopez Pumarejo and Louis Quintanilla, Mexican charge d'affaires.

Dr. de los Rios, members of his family and the embassy staff and servants, more than 20 persons in all, left the chancery in a body. The two Latin-American diplomats sealed the embassy doors at 2:30 p. m.

The Colombian and Mexican embassies will serve as joint custodians of the Spanish government property here, but are not expected to act as intermediaries in negotiations between the United States and the Franco regime. Spanish consular offices in this country and insular territories have been entrusted to Cuban consular officials.

Dr. de los Rios paid a farewell call on Secretary Hull, then he and his family went to New York where he will join the faculty of the New School for Social Research.

Diplomatic circles could recall no peace-time parallel to the present stewardship of Colombia and Mexico over the Spanish Embassy.

Dr. Odum Opens Agriculture School Lecture Series

Enduring civilization according to American ideals can be attained only "through the orderly development of the capacities and institutions of a strong and virile people," Dr. Howard W. Odum, of the University of North Carolina, declared last night in an address to the Department of Agriculture Graduate School.

"The time has come," he continued, "when the world at large, and America in particular, must realize that destiny depends upon the conservation of . . . physical resources."

Dr. Odum presented the first of a series of lectures to be held each Friday afternoon in the next nine weeks.
